D. C. Business Accused of Maintaining Negro Ghetto

National Committee On Segregation in D. C. Also Accuses U. S. Government

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Washington's dominant business interests—and the Federal Government—yesterday were charged with "building ghettos of the mind, body and spirit" for this city's Negroes.

In a stinging 91-page report, a research committee of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital declared:

"The segregation of Negroes (in Washington) is worse than it was 60 years ago."

The report, issued in the name of the full committee, was prepared for the group by a 22-man staff directed by Dr. Joseph D. Lohman, University of Chicago sociologist and a former associate director of race relations for the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

Mrs. Roosevelt on Committee

Field studies for the report occupied eight months, and the basic study—of which the report is a summary—was financed by social study societies and individuals at a cost of $40,000, it was announced.

Heading the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital is Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, New York. Listed among 91 members are Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Bishop Angus Dun of the Washington Episcopal Diocese; Senator-elect Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis, Phillip Murray, president of the CIO, and Publishers Marshall Field of Chicago and Palmer Hoyt of Denver. The committee members listed include 14 Washington residents and four members of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

Segregation in Washington, the report declares, constitutes "a blot on our Nation." Repeating some of the statements made in the October, 1947, report by the President's Committee on Civil Rights, but dealing in detail with causes of segregation, in addition to effects, the segregation report declares:

Board of Trade "Real Ruler"

1. That Washington "officially is run as a benevolent dictatorship by three commissioners appointed by the President."

2. That unofficially "it is run by the 'friends of court,' the dominant real estate, commercial and financial interests, formally organized as the Board of Trade."

3. That "these are the special interests which have planned the segregation of Negroes in housing, jobs, theaters, restaurants, parks, and playgrounds."

4. That as late as 1889 a law appeared in District statutes requiring equal rights for Negroes in restaurants, hotels and barber shops here. At the turn of the

Equal Right Law of 1872 Has 'Vanished'

Failed Mysteriously To Appear in D. C. Code After 1900

Beginning in 1872, and continuing at least to 1889, Washington had a law requiring equal rights for Negroes in hotels, restaurants, barber shops, bath houses and "ice cream saloons."

The present-day disclosure of the law was made by the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital. A study of old records here yesterday confirmed this fact.

Corporation Counsel Vernon C. West, at the request of a reporter, checked through legal documents in his office and established that the law was passed in 1872 by the Legislative Assembly in the days when the District had home rule.

West, who has been practicing law here since 1908, said neither he nor any lawyer he knows was aware of the old law, which is noted in force as late as the compiled District statutes of 1887-89, but does not appear in the District Code of 1901.

No Record of Repeal

He could find no specific record of its repeal, said West, and "can only assume" that it was deliberately dropped out of local laws when Congress recodified District legislation in 1901.

West leafed through the old records with great interest to trace the old law.

Another record he found added a further element of mystery to the situation, however. A notation in another legal record which shows the 1872 law still "in force" in 1912.

This notation appears in the Comprehensive General Index of the Laws of the District of Columbia:

"Discrimination — between guests, etc., on account of color. Comp. Stat. 184, Sec 150" (the 1872 law).

Asked if he could offer any explanation of this, West said all he could suggest is that he has found several errors in that particular 1912 index, and this might be another example.

Doesn't Know Answers

When a reporter asked if there is any possibility of the law still being actually in effect, despite its absence from the District Code, West replied:

"I really don't know the answer to that. To be absolutely positive, you would have to check legislation back to the turn of the century. Of course, it appears the law was deliberately dropped.

Marriage Law Charges Not Pressed

Prosecutor Withholds Names of 13 Pastors Remiss in Filing Notices

A prosecutor yesterday tempered justice with mercy and withheld the names of 13 ministers who failed to make marriage license returns within the 10-day period required by law.

The 13 ministers all were excused with "warnings" not to repeat the offense.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King announced the policy of giving the clergymen one chance to meet the technical requirement before instituting criminal action and exposing them to the spotlight of publicity.

Last week, the publicity spotlight was focussed on a group of nine clergymen who were cited for infraction of the notice provision.

One of the nine forfeited $10 collateral on the charge. Eight others were let off with warnings after hearings in King's Municipal Court office.

The forfeiture was entered by the Rev. Andrew R. Bird of the Church of the Pilgrims, 22d and P sts. nw.

The eight who were warned but excused without charges being pressed were the Revs. Edward Hughes Pruden of First Baptist Church; E. L. Harrison, Shiloh Baptist Church; Charles W. Wood, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek; James H. Miers, Fourth Presbyterian Church; John J. Queally, Church of the Transfiguration; Harry V. Porter, Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church; William L. Turley, Mount Gilead Baptist Church and the Rev. Smallwood E. Williams of the Bible Way Church.

The names of the nine were released by King under his original policy of allowing publication of the identity of persons summoned. However, after protests from ministers and others, the Corporation

Wreckage of C-47 Sighted 7 Men Believed Unhurt

Wreckage of a C-47 transport plane missing since Thursday in Greenland, has been sighted by a search plane, the Air Force announced last night.

Seven persons, identified only as Air Force personnel, were believed aboard, officers at Westover Base, Mass., told the Associated Press. Messages from Harmon Air Force Base, Newfoundland, indicated none of the passengers was injured.

A ski-equipped rescue plane was sent from Harmon to the scene of the crash landing, some 1000 miles away.

The wreckage was sighted 60 to 70 miles north of Bluie West 1, a base used by the Military Air Transport Service on the southwest tip of Greenland. Supplies were dropped by the B-17 which located the plane.

Martial Law Is Extended By Chiang

No Explanation Given For Order Affecting Nationalist Areas Untouched by War

Nanking, Dec. 10 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek proclaimed martial law tonight for all Nationalist China except the island of Formosa, Tibet and three semi-independent far western provinces.

The Communist-threatened cities of Nanking, Shanghai and Peiping already have been under martial law for a month.

There was no explanation for tonight's action extending military rule to huge South China areas untouched by combat.

It came as the Communists were attempting to cut behind the Hwai River line which is Nanking's last barrier north of the Yangtze River, and as government troops struggled to smash two Communist-laid traps farther north.

A spokesman for the Communications Ministry disclosed that Communists had temporarily severed the railway between the Hwai River line anchor of Pengpu and Pukow, Nanking's railway terminal on the north bank of the Yangtze.

The spokesman said the railway had been cut in four places about 80 miles northwest of Nanking, but that repairs had been made within 24 hours.

The government still was trying to extricate four of its army groups caught in two Communist encirclements northwest of Pengpu and southwest of Suchow.

Continuing bad flying weather grounded the government air force, on which main reliance had been placed to try to save the trapped Second, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Sixteenth Army Groups.

The Communist radio meanwhile broadcast a prediction that "it is possible fundamentally to overthrow the Kuomintang government within around one year's time from now."

Marines Going to China To Protect U. S. Lives

Shanghai, Dec. 10 (AP).—Leathernecks will be brought to Shanghai to protect American lives in any emergency resulting from China's civil war, it was announced today by Admiral Oscar C. Badger, commander of the United States Fleet in the Western Pacific.

"We are not here to participate in China's civil war. We are here to protect our citizens and give consideration and protection to their activities," Admiral Badger told a news conference.

"It would obviously be impossible for us to assume responsibility for law and order. Therefore, we would put our citizens aboard ship during any period of loss of control."

He said some 2500 Americans remain in China, about half of whom are not essential to American interests. He expressed hope the latter group would leave aboard three ships soon to arrive here.

U. N. Adopts World Bill Of Rights

Votes Declaration Of Freedom and Equality Despite Soviet Objection

Paris, Dec. 10 (AP).—The United Nations tonight adopted over Russian objection the first world bill of rights proclaiming freedom and equality for everyone.

The vote was 48 to 0, with eight abstentions and two delegations absent.

When the ballots were counted the delegates stood to applaud Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who has championed the declaration since its beginning two and a half years ago. Russia and her satellites sat in silence.

During the crackling Assembly debate, the chief Soviet spokesman, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, accused the United States, Britain and France of paving the way for World War II. The fiery deputy Foreign Minister seized the occasion to launch one of the bitterest attacks yet against the West.

Puts Chief Blame on West

Vishinsky charged it was the leaders of the West—not Hitler—who share the chief blame for the second World War. He said "Britain, supported by the United States, did everything in order to open the door to Hitler's attack against Russia."

The Munich agreement, he declared, opened the way for the war.

The adopted document, entitled "Universal Declaration of Human Rights," has only moral authority until the next regular Assembly in September 1949. Before that meeting opens, a human rights covenant is to be drafted. The covenant would obligate signatory countries to respect individual rights or face penalties.

Dr. Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, president of the current Assembly, said the declaration "gradually will terminate political differences" in the world.

Western delegates described the document as a "potent ideological weapon" against communism. Russia and her allies in the Slav bloc charged it would foster fascism everywhere, and tried to defeat it with a filibuster they began last night.

Eight nations abstained from voting. They were South Africa, Saudi Arabia and Russia and her five allies — Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, White Russia and the Soviet Ukraine. Honduras and Yemen were recorded as absent.

Wording of Preamble

The preamble of the declaration says: "The recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of the human family is the foundation of justice and peace in the world."

Some of its provisions call for, without regard to race, color or sex:

Freedom of thought, conscience and religion, of opinion, expression and assembly. Prohibition of slavery. Freedom of movement within a country and the right to travel abroad. Right to hold property. Privacy of the home. Right to work and to have a free choice of work. Protection against unemployment. Right to free education. Right to leisure.

U. S. Grand Jury Calls 3 Witnesses Sought By House Spy Hunters

Alger, Donald Hiss And Former U. S. Chemist to Testify In New York Inquiry

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House spy hunt ran afoul of the Federal grand jury investigating espionage again yesterday as the Un-American Activities Committee defied a Justice Department demand that it pipe down.

The new mix-up came after the New York grand jury beat the House unit to three witnesses and convened a Saturday session to hear them.

The House committee subpenaed Alger and Donald Hiss to come here for questioning this morning only to learn they were under a continuing subpena from the grand jury.

The grand jury won the round when the committee called off today's hearing and announced the Hiss brothers will be called in next week.

It won another when the committee earlier postponed a scheduled hearing of a "mystery" witness because the grand jury had reached him first.

Former U. S. Chemist

The third witness was William Ward Pigman, 38-year-old former Bureau of Standards chemist, located at Appleton, Wis. Pigman, accused by Chambers of being one of three men who passed him secret documents, is slated to go before the grand jury today.

House investigators meanwhile produced a witness the grand jury was through with—the man who for 10 years secreted the "pumpkin documents" in an abandoned dumb-waiter in his mother's Brooklyn, N. Y., home without knowing their portent.

Ignoring the Justice Department warning, the House committee examined in open session 37-year-old Nathan L. Levine, New York attorney and nephew of the wife of former Communist Whittaker Chambers. Levine described how he hid a large manila envelope containing the secret Government documents because Chambers was "in morbid fear of being liquidated by the Communists."

The latest tangle occurred when the committee excused Levine and subpenaed for closed session questioning today Alger Hiss and his brother, Donald.

Was Assistant to Sayre

Alger Hiss, now president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, was assistant to Former Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre during the 1937-38 period. Chambers claims secret information was passed on to him.

In a sworn statement to a House Un-American Activities subcommittee, Chambers named Alger Hiss, Henry Julian Wadleigh, examined by the committee Thursday, and Pigman as three men who relayed information to him.

Hiss not only has denied the charge, he earlier sued Chambers for $75,000 for calling him a Communist. It was in a pre-trial hearing of this suit, rather than in the dramatized hollow pumpkin on Chambers' farm, that the first purloined documents were turned in by Chambers.

Informed through news dispatches that Hiss felt he couldn't come to Washington because the

12 of Secret Papers To Be Published Sunday

The House Un-American Activities Committee decided yesterday to make public 12 of the secret documents which a Red spy allegedly secured from the Government files 10 years ago.

Acting Chairman Mundt (R., S. Dak.) announced that these documents will be released for publication in Sunday morning newspapers.

He said these 12 have been "cleared by the State Department as to present national security."

Representative F. Edward Hebert protested against making the papers public "in this piecemeal fashion" but he was outvoted, 4 to 1.

Chambers Quits Time Job

Jurors Hear Mrs. Alger Hiss, Accused of Typing Secret Data

New York, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Mrs. Priscilla Hiss, school teacher wife of Alger Hiss, who is accused of stealing secret documents from the State Department and turning them over to a Communist courier, testified for an hour and a half before a Federal grand jury today.

Mrs. Hiss was said by confessed former Communist Whittaker Chambers to have typed out copies of the documents that her husband was accused of having brought home from top secret files at his State Department offices.

A small woman, her black hair streaked with gray, Mrs. Hiss declined to comment on her grand jury appearance or the charges of Chambers as she left the hearing room with her husband.

Chambers, who also spent most of the day on the fourteenth floor of the skyscraper Federal courthouse, revealed through his attorneys that he had resigned his high-salaried job as one of the senior editors of Time magazine.

"I have offered my resignation as a senior editor of Time magazine," the statement said. "It has been accepted. Both of these acts became imperative when I recently began to make revelations about Communist espionage. When Time hired me in 1939, its editors knew that I was a former Communist; they did not know that espionage was involved."

30,000 Costly Agency Folders Soothe Discouraged Farmers

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

What's the matter with the farmer?

He needs encouragement, says the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture—and the way to get it, ES says, is to ask him encouraging questions.

This week the service put out a guide to the thousands of county agents throughout the country, entitled "Let's Talk It Over."

"Many people are troubled and worried," the two-color pamphlet says. "When Farmer and Mrs. Brown come into the extension office they want information and advice. Things may not be going well at home, in the neighborhood, at the co-op.

"When people are worried they find it hard to think clearly and directly. The counselor's task is to help them think in a straight line. They must first become objective."

So here is how the county agent is advised to approach the farmer's problems. Here are the questions he is to ask, and why:

"Step 1. Face the problem.

"1. Ask: What's the matter, or what's the trouble?

"Try," the pamphlet says, in parenthesis, "to ask the question your own way.

"Purpose: To get the problem into words. Frequently our feelings make us avoid admitting what our problem really is. Until we get it into words we cannot work toward a solution."

Now for the second question:

"2. Ask: Why are you worried about it?

"Purpose: To get Farmer Brown to uncover (in italics) and admit the fear involved. 'Most problems have a fear basis, and we cannot solve them without acknowledging and considering that fear.

"Usually this will come out as: 'Well, I'm afraid that——' or 'I think he ma——y' or 'I don't want him to——.'"

After four pages of that, on glossed paper, the guide says: "Let's see how the plan works in the country."

Ten pages are given to that. Here's part of it:

The agent asks, "What seems to be the matter?"

Farmer Brown replies: "The pump works fine, but somehow I don't think Mary approves of it."

Then the agent should say:

"Is that worrying you?"

Farmer Brown: "Yes, it is. You see Mary and I are pretty close, and I'm afraid she thinks I'm lazy, that I think more of myself than her."

Agent: "What makes you think so?" (Question 3.)

Farmer Brown: "Well, we've always talked a lot when I'm in the house. Seems we don't talk as much lately. Yesterday she came into the kitchen with a bucket of water and I said, 'Why didn't you tell me you wanted water?' She just grunted."

Thirty thousand copies have been sent out to county agents.

House Race Lost, Bride Won

Rep. Rockwell, 62, Marries His Son's Divorced Wife, 33

Colorado's 62-year-old Republican Representative Robert F. Rockwell lost his race for reelection last month, but won a bride when he married the divorced wife of his son, Wilson M. Rockwell.

ROCKWELL

Friends here last night confirmed a United Press report from Miami Beach that the Princeton educated Congressman and cattle raiser was married November 23 to the former Elizabeth Armstrong Rockwell in a civil ceremony.

The bride, who is 33, and Wilson Rockwell were divorced in Miami Beach in April 1947. She is a native of Paonia, Colo., near where Rockwell has a ranch. He represents Colorado's Fourth District. His first wife, Aileen Miller Rockwell, died several years ago. They had two sons, Wilson Miller and Robert Fay Rockwell.

At Miami Beach, Representative Rockwell said he would return here "next week" and go later to his home in Paonia where he will "retire to private life."

Born in Cortland, N. Y., Rockwell has lived in Colorado since 1907, and has served in the House of Representatives here since 1941. He served in the Colorado House of Representatives, 1916-1920; Colorado Senate, 1920-24, and 1938-41; was Lieutenant Governor, 1922-24; Republican candidate for Governor, 1930; member of the State Board of Agriculture, 1932-40, and 1940-42.

He is a Mason, Episcopalian and a Rotarian.

Negro's Widow, Editor Testify

Two White Men Are Indicted In Georgia Ambush Slaying

Lyons, Ga., Dec. 10 (AP).—Two white men were indicted on murder charges today in the ambush slaying of Robert Mallard, Toombs County Negro.

A special grand jury returned true bills after hearing an account of the slaying by Mallard's widow.

It named William L. Howell, 32, a farmer, and Roderick Clifton, 36.

Judge Robert H. Humphrey announced the two would be tried at a special session of Superior Court already called for January 11.

No charges were brought against James Spivey, 24, a third man who had been held in jail. Sheriff R. E. Gray said Spivey would be released immediately.

Howell, Clifton, Spivey and two other white men surrendered earlier when reports circulated the widow would name robed, but unmasked, men she claimed slew her husband.

Mrs. Mallard had signed a warrant charging Howell with murder. Clifton and Spivey were held along with him pending the grand jury's action. The other two were released.

The jury this morning remained closeted with Editor Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution for 45 minutes—longer than any other witness, including Mallard's widow.

McGill has been highly critical on his editorial page of what he called apparent "reluctance" of Georgia authorities to bring to justice those guilty of the slaying.

Other witnesses included Frank Brinson, the first white man to reach the scene of the slaying, and two Negro children, Angeline and William Tim Carter, who were occupants of the Mallards' car at the time of the slaying.

AFL Sailors' Union Threatens Tieup Of ECA Cargoes

San Francisco, Dec. 10 (AP).—The AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific threatened today to tie up foreign ships carrying Marshall Plan cargo if the Economic Cooperation Administration stops shipping of bulk relief cargo in American vessels.

Wednesday Paul G. Hoffman, ECA head, announced he would end a policy of carrying half of all such cargo in American bottoms beginning January 1, because of higher freight costs.

The threat by Executive Secretary Harry Lundeberg of the sailors union followed a protest yesterday by the Pacific American Steamship Association and another by Capt. John A. Cross, secretary-treasurer of the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots Association, West Coast Division.

House Spy Hunters In Defiant Mood

New York grand jury meets today, Mundt told reporters:

"Our committee is willing to wait until the grand jury finishes its work with the Hiss brothers Saturday, but we reaffirm our intention of bringing before us all vital witnesses in this case."

"Almost Unprecedented"

He referred to the Saturday grand jury session as "highly unusual and almost unprecedented" but said his committee had made no effort to bring in witnesses "ahead of the grand jury."

"They can't out-wait Congress," he said.

Then, in another slap at the Justice Department demand that it stop calling in present and future grand jury witnesses, and "prematurely" publicizing the inquiry, he added:

"This committee is not going to permit any agency to squelch its efforts to learn the truth about Communist spying."

Saying the House unit is concerned with only one question, "who stole the documents?" Mundt said it wouldn't interfere "with what would seem to be a highly encouraging indication that they are about to bring to justice the people guilty of stealing these documents from the State Department."

"I think it is perfectly silly for two coordinate branches of the Government to get involved in a running debate over who's going to question a witness or who pops up first with the corpus delicti," Mundt added.

Haven't Been in Touch

He said the House investigators, and the New York district attorney's offices, which formerly exchanged data on the timing of witnesses, haven't been talking together since the Justice Department asked the committee to pull in.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark, who Friday charged the committee with trying the case in the newspapers, had something more to say about it, too.

Leaving a Cabinet meeting at the White House, Clark told newsmen he "just told the truth" when he accused the House group of interfering with the grand jury inquiry.

Then he laughed and said: "I'm filing everything in pumpkins these days so I can locate it."

Concealment Related

The story of how the stolen documents and films were concealed for 10 years before they turned up three weeks ago in pretrial libel hearings and more later in Chambers' pumpkin, was calmly related in open session by Levine.

The nephew of Mrs. Chambers, who lives at 960 Sterling pl., Brooklyn, told the committee that 10 years ago he lived with his parents at 200 Rochester ave., Brooklyn, and the sealed envelope was concealed there.

He recalled that Chambers handed him the bulky envelope and told him that if anything happened to him to turn it over to his wife. Levine said he asked what he should do if both were "liquidated" and Chambers replied: "You would know what to do with it. You are an attorney."

Soon Forgot About It

The witness said he dropped the gummed and taped envelope in a recess above a linen closet in the converted dumb-waiter and soon forgot all about it.

About four weeks ago this Sunday he said Chambers came to his home and he had to be reminded he had it. Chambers told him he wanted it for use in the libel suit Hiss brought against him but even then Levine said didn't suspect the contents of the package.

Levine told how they went to his mother's house and he recovered the envelope.

"I climbed into the air shaft through the bathroom window, reached up and got the package and climbed back into the bathroom window," he said.

"I gave it to him with the 10 years of dust on it. The dust fell in the bathroom and all over. I remember we washed our hands."

He said Chambers went into the kitchen and opened the package.

When Levine followed him into the kitchen, he said, Chambers was standing with his hands full of papers and he heard him exclaim something like "Holy cow" and "I didn't think this was still in existence."

The witness said he then drove Chambers to the Pennsylvania Station. He said he didn't realize what was in the package until last Friday when he read in the newspapers about the documents Chambers had surrendered to the House committee.

"I put two and two together and immediately called the United States District Attorney's office," Levine said.

The witness testified he did not know Chambers ever lived in Washington, nor by any other name than Chambers. He said he had not been in touch with him for more than four years before he called for the envelope. He said he had never heard Chambers mention Alger Hiss.

The committee asked him the question it puts to all witnesses—"Are you or have you ever been a Communist?"

Not Communist, Now or Ever

"I am not a Communist," Levine said, "I've never been a Communist."

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) read into the record the texts of Chambers' resignation as a senior editor of Time Magazine, and Time's acceptance.

Nixon said Chambers could have destroyed the statements and nothing would have happened to him. He said he risked prosecution and his job by giving them up. That touched off a round of statements by committeemen lauding Chambers for producing the documents and criticizing the Justice Department for not catching spies.

Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) said he agreed Chambers rendered a public service but observed that the documents might never have come to light had not Alger Hiss filed suit for libel against the former Red courier.

Pigman Did No Secret Work

By John London
Post Reporter

William Ward Pigman, 38-year-old chemist subpenaed in the red spy investigation, never did work of a secret nature at the National Bureau of Standards, former associates said yesterday.

At the Bureau, from 1930 to 1938, and from 1939 to 1944, he specialized in research on carbohydrates, particularly sugars.

He left the bureau in 1944 to do research for the Corn Products Refining Co., of Argo, Ill. Since 1946 he has been a group leader in chemistry and research associate at the Institute of Paper Chemistry in Appleton, Wis.

From 1938 to 1939 he studied chemistry at the University of Leipzig, Germany, on a fellowship awarded by the Lalor Foundation, of Wilmington, Del.

Rated one of the ten outstanding chemists in carbohydrate research by readers of the Chemical Bulletin, Pigman is a tall, wiry man with steel gray hair and a keen interest in athletics, music and literature.

He met his wife, the former Alice Elizabeth Wolfe, while she was studying social work and he was attending Crane Junior College in Chicago, where both were born. The son of a retired postal worker, he was earning his way through school as an instructor in basketball and arts and crafts at the West Side YMCA.

He transferred from Crane Junior College to George Washington University because he wanted to work for the Government here while attending school, his wife said.

While working days at the Bureau of Standards, he earned B. S. and M. A. degrees at GW in 1932 and 1933. Then, in 1936, he received a Ph. D. in chemistry from the University of Maryland.

His efficiency ratings at hte bureau ranged from very good to excellent.

He started as a $1260 laboratory assistant on May 28, 1930. He moved up through the grades fast, earning a rating of a P-4, as an independent researcher. He was making $3800 when he left the bureau on August 20, 1944. Records indicate he left because he said he sought a job with a better future.

During the war he received occupational deferment from the draft. Records indicate this was because he was assigned at the bureau to a project of the Wheat Alcohol Research Committee of the War Production Board. The project was an attempt to increase the yield of alcohol from fermentation—an effort, apparently, to find solution of the wartime shortage of industrial alcohol, associates said.

Pigman's record notes that he gave more than a gallon of blood to the blood bank drive during the war.

There is no indication he was investigated while at the bureau, a Commerce Department official stated.

He spent eight years writing a textbook published this year on the chemistry of carbohydrates. He is also coeditor of an annual review of progress in the field and is an occasional contributor to scientific journals.

Pigman was a member of the American Chemical Society where he has been "highly thought of personally as well as scientific-nation had been accepted, but stressed that Time was not "prejudging" Chambers.

"Against the admitted disservice to his country of a decade ago must be set the service we are convinced he is trying to perform for his country now," Linen said.

The whole cast of characters in the fantastic case of the pumpkin-shell espionage mystery was assembled here.

Hiss is the $20,000-a-year head of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Also on hand today was Henry Julian Wadleigh, former State Department economist and the second of the three men who Chambers said fed him confidential Government documents knowing that he was a Communist agent. Wadleigh appeared before the House committee yesterday, but refused to answer their queries. Today he spent about an hour in a United States attorney's office, but it was not known whether he appeared before the jury.

The third man named by Chambers, in addition to Hiss and Wadleigh, was William Ward Pigman, now a college instructor, who worked for the United States National Bureau of Standards from 1930 to 1939.

Pigman was reached by telegraph yesterday in Appleton, Wis., and "requested" to appear before the Un-American Activities Committee at 2 p. m. today. Instead, it was reported, he came directly to New York and was expected to appear tomorrow before the grand jury.

Mrs. Hiss, who is about 40 and who teaches at the private Dalton School, posed briefly for photographers. She wore a black coat lined with Persian lamb and a gray hat trimmed with feathers. She told reporters:

"I'm sorry, I don't think I shall say anything. I just don't feel like it."

The pudgy Chambers, who turned over microfilms of documents allegedly passed on to him only after Hiss brought a libel suit against him in Baltimore, talked briefly with newsmen when he left the hearing room after the grand jury recessed for lunch.

He was asked if he resigned his Time magazine job under pressure. He said he did not.

Asked what his prospects were for future employment, he said he had a 300-acre, 30-cow dairy farm in Maryland. It was there that congressional investigators lifted the top of a hollow pumpkin and found the containers holding the microfilm.

In the statement accompanying announcement of his resignation, Chambers said:

"For nine years I have been actively fighting communism. I believe I was helpful in alerting Time's editors years ago to dangers of world-wide communism which have been confirmed by events and which are now generally, if imperfectly, understood in this country. In my own writing I have tried to give expression to human values which I knew from my own experience communism denies and destroys.

"Now, after nine years of work done in good conscience, I have been called upon to expose the darkest and most dangerous side of communism — espionage. This can be done only if a man who knows the facts will stand up and tell them without regard to the cost or oensequences to himself. I cannot share this indispensable ordeal with anyone.

"Therefore, with a quiet and firm mind, I am withdrawing from among the colleagues with whom I worked for so many years and whose support has been loyal and generous."

There were increasing indications that this grand jury would not return indictments in the case before its term expires December 15. It was believed a new panel of jurors would be assembled immediately and the hearings continued.

Jury Will Conclude Spy Inquiry Wednesday

New York, Dec. 10 (NYHT). The Federal grand jury probe of the Chambers-Hiss spy case will be concluded on Wednesday and any indictments forthcoming will be returned then, it was learned today.

The new Federal grand jury, instead of continuing the inquiry in the Chambers-Hiss case as was expected, will begin an investigation on an entirely new and separate espionage matter based on the disclosures last summer of Miss Elizabeth Bentley, confessed wartime courier for Soviet agents, it was learned.

Film Job Suit

House Probe Record Heard By Cole Jury

Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (AP).—A hearing of the House Un-American Activities Committee was re-created in a Federal courtroom today.

With lawyers acting as disc jockeys, the recorded testimony of Film Writer Lester Cole before the committee in Washington was played for a Federal court jury.

The jury is hearing the suit of Cole for reinstatement to his high-salaried job at M-G-M studio.

The studio suspended Cole in December 1947, claiming his conduct before the J. Parnell Thomas committee in October of that year had violated the public conventions and morals clause in his contract.

The jury heard Committee Chairman Thomas tell Cole he could not read a prepared statement on grounds that it was "another case of vilification."

Then Cole was asked if he was or had ever been a member of the Communist Party. Cole's recorded answer was he would like to answer the question but he first wanted to explain about an election in the Screen Writers Guild that was then in progress.

The writer was pressed to answer the Communist question "yes" or "no."

"Can I answer it in my own way?" Cole asked the committee. "I'm very proud to answer the question. When I feel it proper, I will."

There were exchanges between Cole and Chairman Thomas and then Cole was excused with the question unanswered.

Cole's statement—the one not read before the committee—was read to the jury by Federal Judge Leon R. Yankwich. It said in part:

"After years of failure by James Kern McGuinness (executive producer at MGM studio), Rupert Hughes and others of your friendly witnesses to disrupt the Screen Writers Guild, and with it the industry, a desperate appeal was made to Martin Dies, former chairman of the committee.

"Or, maybe Martin Dies made the appeal; at any rate, the investigations (of Hollywood) began."

Cole stated the efforts of the Dies Committee failed to disrupt the Screen Writers Guild, so "a new tactic was employed."

"Willie Bioff and George S. Browne," the statement continued, "were called into the fray. These two men, Browne and Bioff, who ran the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes . . . took on the job of creating chaos in the industry."

Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday appointed Dr. John R. Steelman as acting chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

Later Mr. Truman met with the staff of the board, and heard the experts outline plans that have been made for mobilizing manpower, resources and facilities in the event of war.

Dr. Steelman, who is the Assistant to the President, will take over from Arthur M. Hill when he becomes acting chairman of the NSRB on December 15. Hill is resigning to return to hsi post as head of the Greyhound Bus Co.

Present Status Unchanged

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross was asked whether Steelman's new appointment would change his status as the Assistant to the President.

"No, except to give him some more work to do," Ross said.

Mr. Truman, in a formal state ment, said that Steelman would undertake "the important job of continuing to fit the work of the board and the activities of its staff into the broader framework of total presidential possibilities."

The Chief Executive said that when further steps in this direction have been carried out, he would designate a new chairman of the board so that Steelman may again give full time to his White House job.

Steelman has been sitting in on Cabinet meetings for the last three years.

Closer to Cabinet

His new appointment means that the staff of the National Security Resources will be brought closer to the White House staff. It also means that the seven Cabinet officers who are members of the board will play a more prominent part in the work of the board.

The National Security Act of 1947, which unified the armed services, established the National Security Resources Board as an agency "to advise the President concerning the coordination of military, industrial and civilian mobilization."

President Truman noted yesterday that nearly one half of the national budget now is directly devoted to national defense and international programs.

"The work of nearly all the major units of our Government bears an intimate relationship to mobilization problems," he said. "Under these conditions, the board must not only assume the leadership among the Government agencies concerned with mobilization issues, but must also work closely with other presidential staff advisers."

20 Executives Of Transport Union Ousted

Chicago, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Executive board members of the Transport Workers Union (CIO) announced that 20 international representatives of the union "have been released" from their $100-a-week jobs.

The moves, announced by President Michael J. Quill at a post-convention board meeting here, were another step in strengthening Quill's hold on the union, confirmed by the convention action in voting out of office all officers whom Quill had accused of leftist tendencies.

Quill named 16 of the 20 he said had been released. He said the union has "about" 30 representatives, but that "we don't know exactly how many until we get the complete records from our former officers."

Red Influence Ebbs in Cuba, President Says

Carlos Prio Socarras, President of Cuba, said yesterday he believes all Communist influence will be gone from Cuba when his term of office expires in four years.

Communists have "a very strong party" in Cuba now, Dr. Prio told a luncheon in his honor at the National Press Club. But as labor commissioner before becoming president he deposed many Communist labor leaders, aiming to unite industry "in case of war," he said, and he plans to continue to work against the Communists.

Asked what he thought of the recent military coup in Venezuela, which deposed its elected president, he said, "I am against all movements to remove by force any elected government. Gallegos (Romolo Gallegos, deposed president, was removed by the very people who were given arms to protect civil rights and uphold elected government."

Prio said Cuba is the "southern boundary" of the United States, and ties between the two nations should be close. An armed invasion of Cuba, he said, would be as bad for the United States as for Cuba.

A former newsboy, reporter, editor and newspaper director, Prio called for ending "the barriers against the freedom of the press in many nations. . . ."

After the luncheon, the Cuban paid a 90-minute visit to the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Atom May Get Early Use for Water Supply

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (AP).—Dr. Robert D. Fowler, who was a member of the Manhattan Atomic Bomb Project, says practical use of atomic energy on a large scale is years away, but it may soon help to provide drinking water for certain West Coast areas.

Dr. Fowler is head of the department of chemistry at Johns Hopkins University and a former member of the advisory board of the Atomic Energy Commission.

He told an alumni get-together last night that barring a discovery of a less violent type of "chain reaction" soon, the practical utilization of atomic energy for peacetime needs on a large scale is about 25 years off.

But he said in the very near future it may be used to furnish distilled drinking water to the water-short Los Angeles area.

Dr. Brunetti Quits U. S. Job for Higher Pay

The scientist who developed the proximity fuse has quit the Government ranks to take a job in private industry which will pay him more than twice his present salary.

He is Dr. Cledo Brunetti, 38, of the National Bureau of Standards, known internationally for his invention of printed electric circuits which transmits electricity through lines of silver ink instead of wires. He also invented a radio transmitter so small it could be slipped into a lipstick cylinder, and the two-way wrist radio publicized by Dick Tracy.

The proximity fuse, which enabled shells to explode at variable ranges from targets through radio waves, downed thousands of enemy planes during the war. The fuse was made possible through Dr. Bonnetti's invention of the printed electrical circuits.

Resigns December 31

Dr. Brunetti resigns December 31 to become associate director of the Stanford Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., at a salary "considerably more than twice" the $9500 yearly he now receives. His resignation has been accepted by bureau head Dr. Edward U. Condon, who said yesterday, "as long as Congress limits salaries we cannot hope to retain our best scientists." Dr. Brunetti's salary is limited by Congress at $10,330.

Despite the fact that his invention revolutionized antiaircraft warfare, Dr. Brunetti never received a cent for developing the proximity fuse. Government sources said that he sold the patent to the Government for "$1 and other valuable considerations."

However, when Dr. Brunetti made an effort to collect his dollar, he was told that no money had been appropriated to pay Government inventors, regardless of the importance of their inventions.

Dr. Brunetti said that the Government's loyalty checks were no factor in his decision to resign and that the investigation of Dr. Condon had inspired himself and other scientists to remain with the Government. He said he had been "cleared" by the Army, Navy and FBI, but felt an obligation to his family he could no longer ignore.

Parade of Planes Tests New Chicago Airport

Chicago, Dec. 10 (AP).—A parade of planes tried out Chicago's new Lakefront Airport, dedicated today.

The 2800-foot metal-topped strip is on Northerly Island, close to Chicago's downtown loop district.

In a dedication speech, Oscar Hewitt, commissioner of public works, said "this airport is closer to more people, businesses, offices, stores, shops, theaters and hotels than any other airport in any city in the world."

Thomas Seeks to End Case

District Court was asked yesterday to avoid the indictment against Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), accused of a fraud conspiracy involving setting up a system of paper employes to get salary "kickbacks."

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut took the motions to dismiss the true bills under advisement.

William H. Collins, attorney for Thomas, argued that the indicting grand jury was illegal. He said that all members of the panel must be equally paid. The grand jury had 12 Government-employed members when empaneled. They received no compensation for their jury service but were granted paid annual leave from their Government posts. Other jurors were paid $5 daily for the jury service.

Collins also argued the three-year statute of limitations nullified the conspiracy indictment.

Germans Ask Allies to Ease 3-Zone Control

Bonn, Germany, Dec. 10 (AP).—German officials proposed today that the Western Allies relinquish all controls over the British, American and French zones except those directly concerned with the occupation.

The proposals were contained in a resolution adopted by the main committee of the German Parliamentary Council which is drawing up a constitution at Bonn for the three western zones.

The resolution held that the occupation purposes were security of occupation personnel, promotion of a peaceful and democratic Germany, and security of Germany (because Germany is not in a position to defend her own security.

Under the proposals, German legislation would be subject to veto by the occupation powers only when the legislation did not con- German courts would be independent.

Occupation personnel would be subject to civil action in German courts—except actions against occupation personnel who acted in performance of duty. Military courts would deal only with crimes committed by ar against occupation personnel.

All restriction on German economic relations with foreign countries would be lifted and German consulates would be established abroad.

German patent rights and copyrights would be restored. Scientific research should be limited only in cases which might lead to production of weapons for war.

Official Purge Is Extended in Soviet Zone

Berlin, Dec. 10 (AP).—A campaign to purge officialdom in the Soviet zone of Germany was extended today.

The German Economic Commission ordered a 20 per cent slash in its payroll. The Soviet-licensed news agency ADN said employes kept on would be chosen on an efficiency basis. Germans who have fled from the Soviet zone have said officeholders are chosen for their efficiency in party work.

Friedrich Ebert, Communist-dominated mayor of east Berlin, was said by ADN to be ready to launch a cleanup of municipal employes with an elaborate screening process that presumably would shake out all but the most loyal Communists and sympathizers.

Soviet newspapers said Ebert also planned sweeping changes in east Berlin's judicial system. Legal education will be discounted and workers may be chosen as judges even though they have no knowledge of the law, the newspapers said.

It was announced that a death sentence had been pronounced on Richard Horstmann, high executive in a Saxony textile company, after trial on charges of smuggling 25,000 pairs of women's stockings to western Germany by way of the Berlin airlift. Five other figures in Saxony's textile industry were condemned to death earlier this week.

Bramuglia Still Hopeful About Berlin

Argentine Foreign Minister Juan A. Bramuglia, who tried unsuccessfully to mediate the Berlin blockade deadlock, said yesterday he still is "stubbornly optimistic" the crisis can be solved.

He made the statement upon leaving the White House. It was his first personal talk with President Truman since they met in Rio de Janeiro a year ago. He was accompanied by Argentine Ambassador Dr. Jeronimo Remorino.

Bramuglia was chairman of the United Nations Security Council when it took up the Berlin dispute last month.

He said he talked briefly to Mr. Truman about Berlin but that no reference was made to a possible settlement. The next move will be decided, he said, when a group of experts working on the problem report back to the Security Council in January.

Refreshing Honesty

Meeting in Norfolk recently the Virginia Baptist General Association came admirably close to adopting an honest report on racial segregation. The association's interracial committee brought in a report that, before it was eliminated, contained what seems to us a refreshing admission of human weakness and, therefore, the essential first step toward improvement. The key paragraph on segregation is worth quoting in full:

> We confess that we are prejudiced on this question in spite of the desires that come to us at times to be otherwise. We believe that most Baptists are likewise prejudiced. We confess that we are fearful, that we are afraid—for political, or ecclesiastical, or social reasons—to follow the way of Christ. We believe that most Baptists are likewise fearful and afraid. We confess to God our sins in this matter and plead to God to make us more willing to be Christlike in our relation to all races.

The report was written by and of Baptists. It might have included every other denomination, or in fact have been written without any regard for sectarian divisions. All of us are prejudiced. Biases of one sort or another are among the most natural and common of human traits. They are not restricted to the members of any race, religion, social group, or economic class. But every group and individual has in common the ability to rise above prejudice in the public domain, and the first step toward that end is an honest recognition of the existence of prejudice.

The Baptist association debated the committee's confession of human frailty long and heatedly. In the end the offending paragraph was deleted on the grounds, according to the news report, that it might arouse unfavorable reaction and misinterpretation. This seems to us a bad misjudgment itself. We have no desire to criticize Baptists in particular, or even to parrot Dr. Samuel Johnson's haughty (though just) dictum that, "A common prejudice should not be found in one whose trade it is to rectify error." But we feel the association was misled. A humble recognition of prejudice and a desire to rid oneself of it are surely less open to misinterpretation than what appears to be a rigid denial that race prejudice and its public practice are wrong.

Surface Unity

President Truman's order to the armed forces not to debate the defense budget in public seems to have been taken seriously in at least part of the military establishment. Certainly, if there were the genuinely integrated approach to the budget required by unification, it would save the Administration and Congress a good many headaches. Whether a mere prohibition against squabbling in public can force basic agreement is something else. Yet if the fundamental conflicts are not healed but merely suppressed, then the effect of the President's order will be to give a false picture of unity which has not in fact been achieved.

The principal criticism to be made of unification to date is that the three services still think too often in terms of partisanship rather than in those of the over-all defense of the United States. This is apparent in the jockeying for funds that continues despite reports of top-level agreement and in the inspired stories about the budget that leaked out before the President's order. To be sure, such differences as exist may be magnified by the press, and some of the running fight may be waged by zealots outside the services proper. We are convinced, for example, that the Joint Chiefs of Staff are making an honest effort to present a united front. But unfortunately their decisions have not always prevailed against cocktail party gossip in which their subordinates have participated.

In the present budgetary proposals it should not be necessary to talk of a "balanced force." This phrase has been used as a defense against the possible hogging of most of the funds by one service in the final congressional appropriation. The Air Force is, of course, the service most likely to walk off with the giant's share. It should be obvious to airmen as well as to Congress, however, that planes alone are no defense—and in this connection the reported reduction in the number of projected air groups ought to be weighed against the number of planes in each group. If the Air Force is to be considered the first line of defense, as we believe it should, it will still need ground troops to hold bases and ships for supplies. This is what is meant by a "balanced force." The very fact that the phrase has to be invoked reflects the lack of really unified thinking.

The taxpayer has a direct concern with the development of a unified defense, because as long as there is squabbling over missions and funds there will be waste—a point which the Hoover Commission undoubtedly will document. The Joint Staff which serves under the Secretary of Defense most nearly reflects the allegiance to the military establishment as a whole, though we gather that an officer would rather work on planning with his own branch of the service. Perhaps the feeling of unity of mission cannot be fully attained unless all members of the armed forces wear the same uniform. At the very least it requires constant interservice education. Unity cannot be established automatically by law, but loyal adherence to decisions once made can be insisted upon. Until the teamwork which unification seeks to inculcate extends beneath the surface, there will be a perilous gap in America's defense.

Safeguarding Shanghai

Evidently steps are being taken to give protection to Americans who may find themselves marooned in Shanghai by a Communist incursion. The last time this great port was similarly endangered was in 1927, when Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalists came to power, having defeated the coalition of warlords which one after the other ran the Chinese government. But the situation in Shanghai has changed altogether since then.

In 1927 Shanghai, which was built from the ground up by foreign enterprise, contained two enclaves over which the Chinese had no exclusive jurisdiction. One was the International Settlement, the other the French Concession. In time of danger, therefore, the foreigners had a treaty right to protect their own citizens and their property. This they did in 1927, establishing a perimeter beyond which neither troops nor refugees could pass without permission. There was no trouble, and the foreigners not only saved their holdings from depredation but also helped considerably to succor the flood of Chinese refugees. Today, however, the only specific treaty rights granting foreign occupation are those relating to Tsingtao. Here the Chinese government allows the American Navy to keep a naval station, and it is under this privilege that the Marines there have recently been augmented. Elsewhere in China there are no treaty rights warranting the establishment of zones of security for foreigners, beyond the rights flowing from international usage which the powers have always assumed—the United States since it was born—to safeguard their nationals during a breakup of authority such as is envisaged in Shanghai.

The danger to foreign life and property, on the analogy of 1927, would come from the soldiery in retreat. In 1927 the warlord armies were in precisely the same condition of fightlessness that many Nationalist divisions have lately exhibited. In this condition, soldiers are given to pillage, desperation and fright, and so it proved in 1927. In these circumstances there is need for all interested powers to tell the belligerents that steps will be taken to safeguard both nationals and property in Shanghai during any overturn of authority. This would mean the landing of an international brigade for emergency duty. Such a course was suggested in these columns a while ago, but, judging from reports from Shanghai, the only action that seems in contemplation is national and individual action. The British seem to be going about the job in the most businesslike way—a way which no doubt is evoking the respect of the Chinese population. They are reported from Shanghai, indeed, as seeing a possibility, when and if the Communists win control, of capitalizing the anti-American sentiment among both the Communists and the Nationalists. This is one reason they are less inclined to quit than the Americans, though there are other reasons, viz, the British are less loosely connected with their environment, and they have been less encouraged to quit by their government.

Of course, everybody that wants to withdraw should be afforded all facilities for so doing. But it would be a mistake to give the impression that the American authorities would welcome a wholesale evacuation. It would likewise be foolish to show timidity in this matter of affording protection. There is a community of interest in saving Shanghai from the mobsters which should be overriding. The signatories of the embryonic Atlantic Alliance would be well advised in their individual as well as their common interest energetically to take steps against any possible threat to their nationals and property in Shanghai from mob action.

Man And Subman

In Paris last week, Don Luiz David Cruz-Ocampo went before the General Assembly of the United Nations to demand that the refusal of the Soviet Government to permit Russian-born wives of foreigners to accompany their husbands out of the country be declared a violation of human rights and contrary to natural law. The speech of Don Luiz, which was full of eloquent indignation, was given dramatic emphasis by the knowledge among the delegates that such a case had occurred in his own family.

When Don Luiz was Chilean Ambassador to Moscow, his son, Alvaro, who had accompanied him on this mission, had fallen in love and had married a Russian girl. When Don Luiz was recalled by his government, he was notified by the Russian authorities that his daughter-in-law, Dona Lida Liessina, would not be permitted to leave the country. Thereupon the son, rather than accept this forcible separation, chose to remain in Russia, and to endure, as his father told the delegates, whatever persecutions the MVD might devise for himself and his wife.

Last Monday, the Soviet delegate, M. Pavlov, rose to reply to Don Luiz; and the Assembly, or such part of it as was still capable of making such distinctions, was given a lesson in the difference between tragic eloquence and buffoonery. The reason, said M. Pavlov, that the pampered and luxury-loving women of Russia are not permitted to leave the Soviet Sybaris is that their government knows them to be incapable of enduring the hardships to which they would be exposed in bourgeois countries. To support this argument M. Pavlov recited what he said were the harrowing testimonies of Russian women of their experiences abroad. There was one, he said, who had married a British subject and had trustfully gone with him to the primitive and barbaric capital of London only to discover that she was expected by social convention to have her husband's supper ready for him when he returned from his work and to wash the dishes when the meal was over.

Even more harrowing was the case of another Russian woman in England who was forced to pawn her jewels when her husband, owing to the notorious inefficiency of the capitalist system, was thrown out of work. To ask a Russian woman to live without jewelry, M. Pavlov implied, was comparable to asking a farmer to raise crops without land or a musician to play without an instrument. This particular woman, it seems, was driven in the excess of her misery to seek divorce, so that she might return with her child to Russia; there he would never know the poverty which had degraded his father's life.

What is amazing about this speech is not M. Pavlov's cynical effrontery in making it, with an apparently straight face, to the delegates, but his apparent unawareness of the degree of self-degradation involved merely in the willingness to utter such rubbish. The truth is that he was insulting not so much the intelligence of his listeners as his own status as a human being. It becomes more and more evident that such concepts as human rights and dignity are utterly incomprehensible to the Stalinist mind. After all, men who have no respect for their own theoretical status as rational creatures cannot be expected to have much respect for the theoretical rights of husbands and wives. For all the impression that Don Luiz's eloquence could be expected to have on such persons as M. Pavlov, he might as well have held his peace.

Railroad Dilemma

Dr. Harold G. Moulton points out in his pamphlet on "Economic Systems" that changing conditions have rendered obsolete basic regulations originally intended to prevent railroads from making unreasonable profits. Today the problem is how to "maintain a level of rates high enough to cover costs and provide for essential improvements in railroad service." With that objective in mind, the railroads can present a strong case for the rate increase for which they recently applied and on which hearings are now in progress.

Although railway earnings have shown an encouraging increase this year, operating costs continue to rise and eat into net income. The roads are compelled to make large outlays for modernization and new equipment. President Woodruff of the Erie Railroad notes that in 1947 the roads spent 864 million dollars for capital improvements and paid out only 236 million dollars in dividends. This year they will spend 1.2 billion dollars for improvements. Owing to inadequate earnings in the past and general pessimism concerning the future of the roads, Mr. Woodruff says, it has been years since railroad companies could get enough capital through common stock issues to finance improvements and purchase new equipment. They must either borrow for such purposes or dip into current profits, if they have any, thereby reducing dividends.

Conceding that the railroads need more adequate returns on invested capital does not, however, answer the question whether that need will be furthered by another increase in freight rates. Rail rates have risen about 44 per cent since the end of the war and those increases have already weakened the competitive position of the roads in relation to other transportation services. Shippers from various parts of the country opposed to further rate increases cite figures showing that the proportion of freight carried by trucks has risen sharply following postwar advances in railway freight charges. Another advance in freight rates will, they warn, accentuate this diversionary trend.

Railway executives realize that they cannot continue indefinitely to raise rates without risking traffic losses that would more than neutralize the gains from such increases. Hence they are more and more directing their fire against competing truck, water and air transportation agencies that enjoy the advantages of Government subsidies in the form of public outlays for roads, waterway improvements and airline terminals. The argument that it is unfair for railways to be subjected to subsidized competition is logical, but it is also futile to stress the point, as there is no reason to suppose that public spending for improvements that tend to draw traffic away from the railroads will be stopped or substantially reduced.

If, owing to subsidized competition or other causes, railway managements find it impossible to earn adequate returns on invested capital by successive rate increases, the only feasible solution for their financial problem will lie either in direct subsidization of the railroads, too, or in a shift to Government ownership. Dr. Moulton, to be sure, suggests another possible solution: namely, restriction of the regulatory powers of the Government and restoration to the industry of the managerial functions that have been taken over by the ICC. If railway managements possessed the power to act quickly on matters affecting operating costs, the roads could, no doubt, be run more efficiently and economically. Any such proposals, however, would encounter violent political opposition.

Police Widows

On December 2 Police Corpl. Beacham lost his life in the pursuance of his duty. Within the past five years eight policemen have lost their lives in the line of duty. Five were shot to death and three were killed in automobile accidents. Of these eight, five have left children—one, four; one, two; and three, one child each. The other three officers were survived by widows only. Under the law as it now stands a widow receives $60 a month until she remarries—in which case the pension is discontinued—and each child, $10 a month until it reaches the age of 16.

It may be contended that these women can go to work, and this may be feasible in some instances, but in others it may not. Furthermore, and this is the paramount issue, it does not relieve the community of its responsibility. Give these women and their children enough to exist on. We owe it to ourselves no less than to them, for in my opinion this is a civic obligation we have failed to discharge.

LESLIE AMOURI.
Washington.

In January, 1920, there was another headline probably reading "Policeman Killed on Duty." He left a widow and four children, one not yet born. At the time of his death the pension was $30 for the widow and $5 for each child under 16. Without going out to work she would have not been able to support her family on that; she, too, made a sacrifice to her children by working.

About 1934 or 1935, the pension was raised to $60 and $10 for each child under 16. That was the last raise to my knowledge.

She has never remarried and is still working to keep the home and other things she has amassed in all those years. In her declining years, she, too, will be getting $60 a month.

She has taxes to pay on her home, fuel to buy to keep her warm, food, lights, and the same minor bills to pay we have. So have all the widows of the police force and Fire Department.

Wake up, Congress! Make their burdens a little lighter and their later years a little happier.

"China's Fate"

In his December 4 column entitled "China's Fate," Mark Sullivan does not definitely say what the consequences of Communist control of China are likely to be. Aside from repeating John Hay's generalization that whoever understands China has a key to world politics for the next 500 years, he cites General Chennault and the House Committee on Foreign Affairs as being of one mind that the fall of China to the Communists will virtually result in world domination for communism.

Even William Z. Foster's statement as to the importance of the war in China is broad and general. It is this sort of innuendo about the importance of China to us that has influenced us to try to do something about China for the past 100 years.

It was an American named Ward, who in 1860 led a group known as the "Ever Victorious Army" against the Taipings and gave his life for Chinese imperial survival. After the Boxer Rebellion in 1900, in which Allied troops went to the relief of Peking, John Hay enunciated his famous "open door" policy of equal opportunity for all in China. When the Manchu dynasty fell in 1911, a long period of turmoil began with the establishment of the "republic," which has lasted intermittently until this day. It was our involvement in China that led to Pearl Harbor.

The pretense that we were defending "democracy" in China has long since worn thin. What all the present agitation that we once more go to the aid of China really amounts to, therefore, is fear that Russia may get control of China and do something with the "500 million people, not economically or industrially advanced" which no other nation has ever been able to do, including Moscow's immediate predecessors, the Mongols.

All of the evidence of history teaches us that (1) Russia will be able to do nothing with China but acquire a vast headache, and (2) China may do things to Russia that even the Kremlin doesn't suspect. We may, therefore, be entering upon a second and vastly significant phase of the "cold war," a phase in which Russia, not we, may soon be struggling desperately to prevent being overwhelmed by a victim so immense and so lethargic as to consume all of her energies.

Virginia Bridges

Rush-hour traffic delays on Memorial Bridge must cause daily man-hour losses of at least 300 hours on fair days, and 1000 or more hours on rainy days, or at least 100,000 hours a year. Since volume is already at a critical stage, and the Virginia suburbs are still growing rapidly, worse jams may be expected before the twin bridges at 14th st. are completed, and perhaps even thereafter.

To alleviate this no multi-million-dollar bridge is required, but merely a little imagination and perhaps $20,000 spent along these lines:

1. Convert both center lanes of Memorial Bridge to one-way eastbound traffic in the morning, one-way westbound in the evening. This will give Washington commuters four lanes, leaving two lanes for Pentagon travelers. To control this traffic, erect red and green lights over each center lane, perhaps six sets in all, with only one master switch.

2. Widen the approaches and outlets at each end of the bridge. Shut off non-bridge traffic from Lincoln Memorial circle during rush hours, entirely. Use overhead signs to direct traffic expeditiously into the right lanes for eventual destination, to reduce the cross-bucking which takes place at the bridge entrance.

Horace Mann And Sectarianism

In his letter of December 1 questioning C. S. Longacre's knowledge of Horace Mann's attitude toward sectarianism in the public schools, the Very Rev. Francis J. Connell presented quotations from Mann's writings which tended to indicate that he did not oppose such activity.

In giving proper significance to Mann's various utterances on educational matters, we must remember that his efforts were largely devoted to the actual founding of public education in America — and, thus, to the transference of the responsibilities of educational processes from a largely clerical group to public agencies.

The clergy of the times were naturally prominent among the relatively small group who might be considered as "educated" and were thus difficult to dissociate from those processes — and religious beliefs had not then been measured against as great an array of accumulated factual knowledge as is now available.

Let us consider these excerpts from the personal report of his first year's work as secretary of the newly created Massachusetts board of education:

". . . It is an important and substantial part of their duty, as enjoined by law, 'to direct what books shall be used in the several schools,' in their respective towns. When the committee fail in directing what books shall be used, a way is opened for the introduction of books which are expressly prohibited by law, as 'calculated to favor the tenets of particular sects of Christians.' Under such omission, also, the schoolhouse may cease to be neutral ground between those different portions of society, now so vehemently contending against each other on a variety of questions of social and national duty. . . . But the liability and the temptation should be cut off.

"Among any people, sufficiently advanced in intelligence, to perceive, that hereditary opinions on religious subjects are not always coincident with truth, it cannot be overlooked, that the tendency of the private school system is to assimilate our modes of education to those of England, where churchmen and dissenters—each sect according to its own creed—maintain separate schools, in which children are taught, from their tenderest years to wield the sword of polemics with fatal dexterity; and where the gospel, instead of being a temple of peace, is converted into an armory of deadly weapons, for social, interminable warfare. Of such disastrous consequences, there is but one remedy and one preventive. It is the elevation of the common schools."

"To prevent the school from being converted into an engine of religious proselytism; to debar successive teachers in the same school, from successively inculcating hostile religious creeds, until the children in their simple-mindedness should be alienated, not only from creeds, but from religion itself; the statute of 1826 specially provided that no school books should be used in any of the public schools 'calculated to favor any particular religious sect or tenet.'

"The language of the revised statutes is slightly altered, but the sense remains the same. . . . The consequence of the enactment, however, has been, that among the vast libraries of books, expository of the doctrines of revealed religion, none have been found, free from that advocacy of particular 'tenets' or 'sects,' which includes them within the scope of the legal prohibition . . . Independently, therefore, of the immeasurable importance of moral teaching, in itself considered, this entire exclusion of religious teaching, though justifiable under the circumstances, enhances and magnifies, a thousand fold, the indispensableness of moral instruction and training."

"One of the greatest and most exigent wants of our schools at the present time is a book portraying, with attractive illustration and with a simplicity adapted to the simplicity of childhood, the obligations arising from social relationships; . . . one emanating from some comprehension of the benefits of supplying children, at an early age, with simple and elementary notions of right and wrong in feeling and in conduct, so that the appetites and passions, as they spring up in the mind may, by a natural process, be conformed to the principles, instead of the principles being made to conform to the passions and appetites."

Prosperity Picture

Consumer's Soliloquy

NOW WITH the shooting war three years and four months past, I want to know why it's still a major undertaking to buy the right salt shaker, to board a streecar, to get a minor repair on a faucet or a tooth, or to connect by telephone with someone who can tell why a delivery hasn't arrived, or when it has a chance of arriving.

I want to know why about a lot of things in this wonderful postwar world of ours, which was to be so efficient and streamlined—why streetcars are as jammed as ever (and a little scarcer), and why they invariably come in bunches after 20-minute waits; why store counters at which no one is buying are well staffed with clerks, while those with mobs in front have either nobody on call or at best a few ancient, ambling caretakers; why people seem to be breeding like flies from the swarms of them in public places, and why nobody apparently ever stays home out of the way; why I must stand and stand, and wait and wait, or walk and walk, and use up hours of time and kilowatts of energy to achieve the simplest objective, and why, oh, why, so many people with goods or services to sell seem to think there's a war—that is, a hot war—still on.

I WANT to know why it is that in spite of all this full production and even overproduction (with layoffs) we hear about there never seems to be on hand the right size or color of anything I want; why merchandise in which I'm interested always has to be brought from the warehouse or the factory, and why things that are supposed to come in three weeks do well if they make it in three months.

I want to know why something isn't done about personnel by offices, stores, institutions, that serve the public: why housewives who take jobs as saleswomen aren't trained to wait on customers instead of gabbing among themselves; why every saleswoman—or man—I get hold of just began work yesterday and doesn't know the stock; why salespersons leave me to answer telephones and never return; why those supposedly on duty are always coming and going on mysterious errands; why the card system of numbers to insure fair play to the civilized isn't used at every crowded counter; why there is no one around to answer questions about merchandise in these rapidly increasing setups where you serve yourself; why more and more better trained salespersons, information clerks, ticket sellers, aren't employed everywhere in these days of good profits; and if and when the bowing, solicitous floorwalker of prewar days will return.

I want to know why private enterprise at the peak of its prosperity is showing so many of the cumbersome inefficiencies it charges bureaucrats with—inefficiency and rudeness such as at times the Soviet press spanks its bureaucrats for. (And speaking of bureaucrats, why are government workers extension numbers so mysteriously changed every few days?) One thing, though, about bureaucrats—they can shift you by telephone through 27 different persons with cheerfulness and dispatch. Why can't as much be done when you call Zilch & Co. to find out what has happened to the electronic door opener you ordered a month ago?

I WANT to know if this sloppy, puttering way we're doing so many things is because there isn't enough help to go around in industries that serve the public, or because it isn't being hired, or trained, or paid adequately. Are the sleek, overstuffed gentlemen right when they declaim we'll never have efficient service in anything until there's another depression and people learn the value of a dollar"? Or is the moseying, hired help right when it says it's overworked and underpaid by employers who are trying to cut costs to maintain the profits to which they have become accustomed?

Or could it be possible that we can't take prosperity, that it weakens and tempts both those at the counter and those in the counting room, and that it's human nature to soldier on the job and grab and get by with all you can—in this case, all that the public will stand? Is it possible we have to be hit over the head with breadlines and business failures in order to make us use our heads? Or, as prices achieve their predicted "leveling off," and the economy gets on a steadier keel, with neither labor nor goods at such a high premium, will we come down to earth and wake up to the fact that this is 1948—Not 1944?

Sex Education

Rarely have we seen as good an article on sex education as The Washington Post carried on December 5. Your reporter, Elsie Carper, furnished an accurate and useful summary of local public school curricular assets and liabilities in this field. It took quite a bit of "digging" to gain views and information from so wide a variety of responsible sources, and quite a bit of nice writing to summarize the story so compactly, logically, and impersonally. Our sincere thanks to The Washington Post and the writer for this helpful community service.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Seniority As Usual

IN THE aftermath of the November triumph a lot of brave talk was heard about how the Dixiecrats and other turncoats would be read out of a purified Democratic Party. That talk has gone with the wind and the prescription as of now is: More of the same.

Childs

To many in the South this is not an academic question. On the contrary, it can mean political life or death.

Alabama is a good example of how sharply the issue of the Dixiecrats cuts across certain political fortunes. The Dixiecrat organization in Alabama was bossed by wealthy corporation lawyers with important connections in the North.

These same men and the interests they represent are bitter enemies of Alabama's Senator Lister Hill because of the liberal line that Hill takes on most questions. One of the chief Dixiecrats, James Simpson, a corporation lawyer, nearly defeated Hill four years ago. The same crowd is already planning to gang up on him two years from now.

The irony is, of course, that Hill was so overawed by Dixiecrat strength that he came out in opposition to President Truman before the convention. So did his colleague, Senator John Sparkman, who was up for reelection.

National officials of the Democratic Party profess to be afraid of the repercussions if they should intervene in State organizations in the South. Such intervention, it is believed, would be deeply resented. The reform, the argument goes, must originate locally if it is to be effective.

HERE IN Washington "more of the same" means that the Dixiecrats will hold their seniority on congressional committees. What this adds up to is that direction of six Senate committees will go to the South.

Appropriations, Foreign Relations, District of Columbia, Finance and Expenditures in Executive Departments will all have chairmen from the South. In addition, Senator Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina will almost certainly be acting chairman of Banking and Currency, since Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York will, because of continuing invalidism, be unable to take his seat.

Also, the chairmanship on Agriculture will go to Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland will take over the Armed Services Committee. These are border States with a strong Southern infusion in opinion and attitude.

This is, of course, an unreal and abnormal disproportion. Considered from the point of view of population, the unbalance is seen to be even greater. On the seniority basis not a single Senate chairmanship will go to any of the great population centers in the Northeast and Middle West.

MORE than half of the prizes go to the sparsely populated South and border, with the West Coast and its great new population growth being entirely left out. In the House the unbalance is not nearly so great.

The consequence of seniority in the Senate is that six committee chairmanships go to men 70 years of age or older. The veteran is Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who takes over Appropriations. McKellar has already begun to fulminate in the press about what he means to do when he has the reins of power.

Next month McKellar will be 80 years old. During the campaign he put on such a performance as has not been seen since "Broken Blossoms," when he announced his split with his old mentor, Boss Ed Crump, and came out for President Truman with a violin on stage playing "Hearts and Flowers."

When you put this business of senority up to high-ranking Democrats they back away nervously. How else, they want to know, would you cut up the cake, if not on the rule of seniority? They conjure up a frightening picture of Southern Democrats revolting in committee, practicing every kind of sabotage short of blowing up the Capitol itself.

So the show that goes on in January will have striking similarities to performances from the recent past. From the veteran actors who will move on to the stage nothing very new can be expected.

Many newcomers, who found themselves elected on November 3 to their intense surprise, will not like this. But whether they can do anything about it is something else again. The seniority rule seems to have been written on tablets of stone about the time of Moses. Its weight has crushed many an eager, crusading spirit.

5 Nations Give Atlantic Pact Outline to U. S.

The State Department learned officially yesterday what the western European Union would like to see embodied in a North Atlantic treaty.

Envoys of the European countries involved—Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—met for more than an hour with Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett. Canadian Ambassador Hume Wrong also was present, since Canada will sign the Atlantic pact with the United States.

A brief communique said this was the first of resumed meetings that "are expected to continue for some time," and that no information "concerning their substance" would be published until decisions were reached.

The Ambassadors last met with Lovett in September. Since then the European governments have been working out an agreed set of suggestions for submission to the United States.

Yesterday's resumption of the talks opened a new stage, therefore, in the process of negotiating a treaty of mutual defense linking the United States, Canada and western Europe.

Sen. Bridges Leaves Clinic After Operation

Rochester, Minn., Dec. 10 (AP).—Senator Style Bridges (R., N. H.), who recently underwent surgery by Mayo Clinic surgeons, was en route today to Arizona for a rest.

Senator Bridges was operated on November 19 for a gall bladder ailment.

'Sulky Boycott'

British Stand On Israel Hit By Churchill

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—Winston Churchill today urged the British government to abondon its "sulky boycott" of Israel and give prompt recognition to the new Jewish state.

He asked the Labor government to face the fact that the Jews "have a victorious army at their disposal." in Palestine. A continuation of Britain's present unrealistic policy in the Middle East, Churchill said, could produce a falling out with the United States.

The Conservative Party leader also told the House of Commons that Britain should restore full diplomatic relations with Spain "as soon as we can obtain the sanction of the United Nations," and that Spain should be admitted to U. N.

C. P. Mayhew, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, said the cabinet was not prepared "at this time" to recognize Israel.

It would be a "psychological blunder," Mayhew added, for Britain now to support Spain's entry into the U. N.

Churchill expressed concern over the spread of communism in China. Britain, he said, should make it clear she will use her naval, air and military forces to defend the British crown colony of Hong Kong 'from any assault that may be made upon it."

He supported the government's policy in the East-West split over Germany, but urged that attempts be made to reach a settlement with the Soviet Union before the Russians "have the atomic bomb."

Israel to Free 2000, Open Armistice Path

Paris, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Israel beat the sanctions deadline today and agreed conditionally to release 2000 Egyptian soldiers trapped in the Negev, thus opening the way for Arab-Jewish armistice negotiations in all Palestine.

The United Nations announced that Israeli Prime Minister David Ben Gurion had agreed by cable to acting mediator Dr. Ralph J. Bunche's plan to free the Egyptian brigade from El Faluja "by stages."

At the same time, seven influential nations asked the General Assembly to eliminate all references to the late Count Folke Bernadotte's plan when the final U. N. settlement for Palestine is drawn up. By junking all binding conditions, they hoped to attract the necessary two thirds majority vote before the Saturday night adjournment deadline.

Ben Gurion warned Bunche that Israel will release the Egyptian troops, encircled since mid-October, only if Egypt will discuss a Palestine armistice.

Bunche believed Arabs and Jews would now be able to work out an armistice, ending once and for all the Holy Land war, U. N. sources said.

As soon as the Israel note was received the Security Council's "sanctions" committee canceled an afternoon meeting at which it had planned to consider possible punitive action to make the Jews open the Faluja pocket. Israel had been given until 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST) today to give ground on the Faluja issue.

Netherlands, Indonesia Plan Appeal to U. N.

Having failed to reach agreement by direct negotiations, the Netherlands government and the Republic of Indonesia are planning separate recourse to the United Nations, it was learned here yesterday.

The Netherlands government plans to send a noote to othe U. N. Good Offices Commission which brought about a truce between the Dutch and the republic last winter. The note is expected to complain of more than 300 alleged violations of the truce in the week ended last Tuesday.

The Netherlands cabinet has also decided to form an interim government in Indonesia before January 1 without the Indonesian Republic, the Associated Press reported from The Hague. A Dutch Foreign Office spokesman said this "would be the first step on the way to the end, and the end might result in fighting."

The Republican government in Java warned yesterday, however, that such action would result in "great disaster." Indonesian sources in Washington predicted that the republic would appeal directly to the U. N. Security Council in Paris.

The republic has been in physical possession of most of Java and parts of Sumatra and Madoera since the end of the war. The Dutch have planned to create a vast United States of Indonesia, including most of the 3000-mile-long archipelago, to be linked with the Netherlands only by a common crown.

Korea Aid Pact For 100 Million A Year Signed

Seoul, Dec. 10 (AP).—An agreement providing financial aid to the Republic of Korea—subject to approval by the United States Congress—was signed today by Representatives of the two governments.

The document, under which the new republic hopes to get more than 100 million dollars American aid annually for the next three years, now goes to the Korean national assembly for ratification.

It was was signed by Ambassador John J. Muccio, President Truman's special representative, and Korean Prime Minister Lee Bum Suk. Terms are in accord with Economic Cooperation Administration regulations, which require effective and fair use of American aid under United States and Korean observation.

"The agreement will strengthen our finance and economy during the important formative period facing us," said the Premier. "Raw rubber, fertilizer, raw cotton, food and electric power equipment will be brought into Korea virtually without cost to ourselves."

(In Washington, the State Department said the agreement was part of the United States policy of maintaining the South Korean government's independence against attacks by the Russian-sponsored North Korean government. The agreement itself says the Korean government asked American help in order to "avert economic crisis, promote national recovery and insure domestic tranquillity.")

Soviet Plan's Rejection Defended

By The Associated Press

Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy, chairman and American member of the Far Eastern Commission, lashed back as Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin yesterday for criticizing the commission's rejection of a Russian proposal on Japanese industry.

McCoy said in a statement that he acted with "the expressed authorization of the majority of the members." He also said that Panyushkin's action had freed the rest of the member nations on the 11-nation commission from normal practices of not commenting on what ocurs in FEC meetings.

As chairman of the group, McCoy said the Russian proposal was voted down because in one part it was vague and unnecessary and in another part would have exceeded the commission's authority to deal with Japanese matters.

Panyushkin disclosed Thursday that the commission had voted down a Russian proposal to declare: (1) There is no limit on the revival of Japan's peaceful industries, and (2) to prohibit recreation of Japan's war industry and provide for control over a period of years by the nations interested in preventing new Japanese aggression.

American officials privately took the view that Panyushkin's statement was a propaganda measure designed to make the Japanese people believe that the Russians want to do more for them than the other nations are willing to do. That propaganda would be aimed to promote communism in Japan. The vote against the Soviet proposition in the 11-nation policy-making agency was 10 to 1, which means only Russia voted for it.

In his statement, McCoy said that the first of the Russians proposals regarding peaceful industry was rejected because it was considered by other members "as vague or as unnecessary since no limitation on the development of Japanese peaceful industry had ever been adopted or even considered by the commission."

Chinese Embassy to Aid 12 Students in U. S.

By the United Press

The Chinese Embassy has been authorized to give financial assistance to 1200 Chinese graduate students in this country who have been hard hit by their government's August 19 currency reform.

A spokesman said yesterday the Nanking government had granted permission to the embassy to grant up to $400 to students wishing to return to China by February 1. Loans of up to $100 will be given those who wish to stay until they receive additional money from home.

It was emphasized that the plan covers only those classified as "certified self-supporting," who had passed official government examinations to study at their own expense.

Truman Hears Aid Plea of Mme. Chiang

By The Associated Press

President Truman "listened sympathetically" late yesterday to a plea by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek for new American aid to China's hard-pressed Nationalist government.

They talked over the China crisis for about a half-hour at Blair House after a 5 o'clock tea which Mrs. Truman attended.

Mme. Chiang "stated her case and the President listened sympathetically," Eben Ayres, a press secretary, told newsmen.

Mme. Chiang, wife of Generalissimo Chiang, herself told reporters that "the President is the one" to report on the conference.

It was her first meeting with Mr. Truman since she arrived 10 days ago on a hurried, unofficial mission for the anti-Communist Nanking regime.

Ayres said in response to a question he did not know whether Mr. Truman would see Mme. Chiang again. She left after the meeting with Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Secretary of State, to return to the Marshall home at nearby Leesburg, Va., where she has been a guest since her arrival.

Diplomatic officials were frankly skeptical that the result of the conference would be anything approaching all-out aid to China.

These officials said in advance of the meeting, that there was little hope Mr. Truman could offer Mme. Chiang on her plea for emergency United States aid, except a problem to give the whole Chinese a serious continuing study. It is not a question of wavering American sympathy for China, they emphasized, but rather a maze of complex difficulties.

In broad outline, Mme. Chiang was expected to base her plea on these points:

1. Traditional Chinese-American friendship.

2. The view that Chinese Nationalist troops are fighting a war on behalf of all anti-Communist countries.

3. A contention that it is still not too late to save China from the advancing Communist armies.

But presidential advisers indicated they have virtually lost confidence in the ability of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, whose armies have been almost continuously on the march for 22 years, to swing back the tide of Red troops now pressing on his capital.

Death of Czechs' Liberties Not Balanced by Advantages

By Theodore H. White

Fourth of Five Articles

Paris, Dec. 10.—It is in Czechoslovakia that one feels the Communist Party is faced with its toughest political problems.

In general, the Communists have applied the same program that was applied in Poland and Hungary; they have built a planned economy; they have distributed land; production has been speeded up. But all these things which are winning the Communists increasing loyalty in other eastern lands seem here to have failed to develop new loyalties beyond the party's original working-class base.

To a large extent the unhappiness can be traced to last year's critical crop failure which forced the Communists this year to tighten rations and step up exports of vital consumers goods to pay for necessary food imports.

Moreover, many of the new reforms of which the regime so proudly boasts seem to be simply extensions of what the Czechoslovaks had before: they had a first-class social insurance system before the war; they had begun the distribution of land 20 years ago and continued it under the coalition government of the early postwar years. The nationalization of large manufacturing enterprises had begun under the coalition government, too.

Most importantly, Czechoslovak unhappiness has its roots in history; the people had something to lose which the people of Poland and Hungary never possessed: the tradition of liberty. This, today, they have totally lost.

The new laws of Czechoslovakia are no more harsh, nor the police more zealous, than they are in Poland and Hungary. But in the latter, the new laws and police operate against a memory of old government brutality, prejudice and cruelty. Such lands as Poland and Hungary were ruled, from Versailles to the outbreak of World War II, by cold, proud oligarchies living high above the misery and sullen desperation of their people.

In Czechoslovakia, however, the new government registers brutally against the civil decencies and liberties which the prewar government guarded. Czechoslovakia, the most westernized of the eastern lands, had a huge and proud middle class; it still exists, and its record is unstained by Nazi sympathies. The resentment and bitterness of this middle class create for the government a problem of loyalty much more different than anything faced in Poland and Hungary. Secret police, denial of habeas corpus, a controlled press are an outrage to every memory of liberty and dignity.

The new regime registers most sharply as a break with the past, for example, in such areas as learning. Charles University of Prague is one of the oldest and greatest of Europe's schools. Twenty of its approximately 170 professors have been dismissed for political reasons since the Communists took over. Its scholars teach and lecture in fear that Communist-led action committees among their students may consider their teaching suspect of heresy to Marx or Lysenko and report them for dismissal.

In Czechoslovakia, far more vividly than in Poland and Hungary, one can see the profile of the workers' state. In Hungary and Poland, the revolutions were gifts of the Red Army. But Russia did not make the February coup in Czechoslovakia. The Czechoslovak Communist Party won under its own leadership, with its own forces. The armed power behind the coup, before which the other parties crumpled without resistance, came from factory workers drawn into the streets and squares, commanded by the party.

The guiding formula in Czechoslovakia remains the same as in Poland and Hungary. So long as the working class is loyal and the technicians are allowed to carry out their plans, success will follow. The middle class grumbles and complains, but so long as it finds no eternal allies, it is powerless.

Given time and peace, an entire new generation may grow up that does not feel itself chafed and bound by the new press and police. It may even, in 30 or 40 years, come to consider itself free enough to examine the world about it without fear or suspicion.

SEGREGATE—Fr. Pg. 1

Negro Slums Laid To D. C. Business

century this law "mysteriously disappeared."

5. That "Jim Crow here seems to have been first recognized in the Administration of William Howard Taft . . . But segregation did not become general Government policy until the presidency of Woodrow Wilson."

6. Despite Federal orders to the contrary, ". . . discrimination prevails in all (Federal) departments in varying forms, usually as a matter of accepted practice.

7. "The Capital's massed slums are among the ugliest in the Nation . . . No amount of money spent on hospital and medical care can offset the disadvantage of being a Negro in Washington."

8. "If Horatio Alger had a colored face, he would have a hard time in the Capital today . . . excluded from most jobs, just as he would be excluded from downtown theaters and restaurants."

9. "When people are divided by a master-race theory, liberty and justice are impossible. Nowhere is this plainer than in the Capital."

10. That "in many ways, the color ban in the public schools is basic to discrimination elsewhere."

11. "Only by using the power vested in Congress in behalf of the Nation and the Nation's principles can the city of Washington be restored to its original destiny."

Dr. Shuster said a copy of the segregation report was presented yesterday to President Truman, "who received us cordially and told us he would read the report with interest." The President, said Dr. Shuster, said he was "very appreciative" of help given by the Committee on Segregation to the President's Committee on Civil Rights, for the latter's report.

At a luncheon for the national committee yesterday at the Willard Hotel, where the segregation report was officially released, Dr. Shuster was asked if the full national committee had seen and approved the report. He said copies of the report were sent to all members, and the national committee approved the report.

When a newsman said some committee members declared they had not seen the reports, Dr. Shuster replied, "if some members did not get it, it was by the sheerest misfortune." He said he had a great many letters from committee members commending the report, and when asked specifically, said "there is no dissent."

He said there was "criticism of certain few details in the report, which have (since) been amended . . . This committee is a committee of social scientists, and social scientists will make mistakes . . . But it (the committee) will not cling to mistakes if it has made them."

Dr. Lohman, secretary of the national committee in addition to being director of the research study, said the committee on segregation originated at a meeting here in October, 1946, with a primary purpose to "do something about the embarrassment our Nation suffers in the eyes of foreign diplomats coming here."

Called "Eyesore for Nation"

"Washington actually has admirable democratic practices here at some points," he said. "But here is the place where segregation is an eyesore for the Nation."

He stressed that the report, written by Kenesaw M. Landis, a columnist on the Chicago Sun-Times and nephew of the late baseball commissioner, is only a "highlight summary" of study findings, with a full-length report to be issued in the spring.

Among groups which contributed to financing the research study, said Lohman, were the Julius Rosenwald Fund, the Phelps-Stokes Fund of New York, the Marshall Field Foundation, and the American Missionary Association.

Federation Heads Confused

As the report was released at the luncheon yesterday, Charles H. Houston, Washington attorney and a member of the committee on segregation, noted some "minor corrections" to it.

These, he said, are "what we call 'flyspecks,' but inherently the core of the summary is absolutely sound."

One of these corrections, said Houston, involved a reference to Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Board of Recreation and a former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Houston said, "We got two presidents of the citizens federation mixed up," and inadvertently called Wender in the uncorrected report "a leader in the restrictive covenants movement."

Said Houston, "Harry Wender was not a leader of the restrictive covenants movement," and turning to Wender who was in the audience, said, "As the only native Washingtonian on the committee, Harry, I want to apologize to you. Harry, that was an error of the head and not of the heart."

In another section of the report, it was stated, "The exclusion of Negro Catholics from "white" Catholic churches is one of the most disturbing aspects of segregation which Latin Americans find in Washington." It added an alleged instance in which a Catholic from Panama who entered a white church was handed a note with the address of a Negro Catholic church.

A footnote to this, handed to reporters, added, "These incidents are few in number but have symbolic importance. Recently action has been taken in the Archdiocese of Washington to eliminate discrimination."

Commenting on the report's account, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, said:

"I never heard of any such incident. If such a thing happened and I heard of it, I would have acted immediately to correct the situation and prevent it from happening again. An incident of this kind is contrary to the teachings of the Catholic Church.

"The doors of every Catholic church in Washington are wide open to all who wish to come in to pray and to worship Almighty God. The report of the committee is of great social value. I am sorry that this part of the report jumped to a general indictment based on one incident."

Segregation in YMCA

Another paragraph in that section stated, "The canon of Washington Cathedral (Episcopal) has appealed to the Nation for funds to complete a building program, saying that the Capital possesses no physical 'symbol for the sovereignty of God.' But inside the largest churches, Protestant as well as Catholic, visitors are made unwelcome on account of color. Segregation is the public policy of such Christian organizations as the YMCA . . ."

A "footnote" given out for this stated: "The Washington Cathedral is not one of the churches which discriminate against Negroes. People of all races may attend services without segregation."

Houston and other committee members noted that because of day-to-day advances in racial relations, and the fact that writing of the summary report began in January, 1948, "it was impossible to avoid" some outdated statements in the report, which will be under "constant revision."

The segregation report is presented in the graphic technique, with illustrations of such phrases as "We teach democracy to the world—but we practice it in the Nation's Capital with examples like these—African Foreign Minister refused admittance to a white hotel. . . Bolivian educator refused service in a chain restaurant . . ." etc.

Or, "'It's your Capital'—says the Board of Trade (which) promotes the Cherry Blossom Festival and other activities that attract three million visitors who spend 60 million dollars a year in the Nation's Capital. But for Negro Americans Washington has a meaning of its own . . . hotels ('no colored') . . . restaurants 'no colored . . . theaters 'no colored.' . . ."

"In the drive to exclude the Negro" from white housing areas, declares the report, "the Federated Citizens Associations have functioned as the front-line shock troops, completing his encirclement by a network of mutual defense pacts, or agreements not to sell, erected all around the inner zones of the city."

In the District, the report states, there is "the myth of a recent Negro invasion . . . But the proportion of Negroes in the District of Columbia has declined from 33.6 per cent in 1880 to 30 per cent in 1947."

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, of which Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d is chairman, is accused of "driving new highways between the races, and evacuating Negroes from areas where they were free to live in his grandfather's day."

(General Grant, asked for comment on this by reporters during a meeting of the commsision, said he had not yet seen a copy of the report, but would try to get one and give a statement on Monday.)

In the District government, the report states, Negroes are forced "to accept a servant status. Except in segregated units, and in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, Negroes are employed exclusively in such capacities as laborers, janitors, and elevator operators."

"There are 153 Negro policemen in the city today, but . . . there is only one 'Negro scout car' in Washington. There are even fewer Negro firemen, and they are concentrated at the two Negro fire stations . . ."

In private employment here, it was stated, "Negroes are excluded from most skilled trades by the craft unions and from whole industries by management policy . . . the telephone company employs no colored mechanics or linesmen. . . . the big department stores deny Negro women a chance to become clerks . . .

"Just as a Negro is expected to eat standing up at downtown lunch counters, so he is expected to work standing up, or in a kneeling position, or in some job that tags him as a servant to the white man."

Segregation, the report states: ". . . has reached the place in the Capital where a dog cemetery has erected a color bar against the burial of dogs belonging to colored people. In announcing this policy, the owner stated that he assumed the dogs would not object, but he was afraid his white customers would."

The report declared, "It is not in the field of spontaneous human relationships that trouble occurs in Washington, but on a high-policy level where the segregation of the Negro is planned as a matter of good business, and investments are made in the denial of his equal right to own property. It is not the poor whites who set the pattern, but men of acknowledged culture and refinement, the leaders of the community."

In connection with housing segregation, the report states, the 1948 code of ethics of the Washington Real Estate Board provides:

"No property in a white section should ever be sold, rented, advertised, or offered to colored people . . ."

Among active members of the Real Estate Board, and subscribing to its "code of ethics," the report declared, "are 25 banks, insurance and title companies, and building and loan associations. Because of the absence of heavy industry, these groups hold a position of unchallenged leadership in the economic lift of the community."

Negroes have been compressed into dense areas by segregation, the report states, and:

"If you place the point of a compass at the business center of the Capital, a few blocks from Ford's Theater, and describe an arc on the map with a radius of 2¼ miles, you bound the lives and hopes of two thirds of the colored people of Washington."

As one of many pressures on Negroes, "colored people are displaced by public improvements more often than whites because they are concentrated in the blighted downtown areas that are suitable for public construction. And once unhoused, they are worse off than whites because they cannot move freely in the District."

Tuberculosis and other diseases take unusually heavy toll of Negroes in overcrowded areas, states the report. Yet, it declares, while in 1889 all 11 of Washington's hospitals reported they did not deny admission to Negroes, "Now a fourth of the 12 private hospitals exclude Negroes altogether, and the remainder allot them a number of beds in segregated wards."

Discussing the present dispute between the Board of Recreation and the National Park Service over control of District playgrounds, in which the playgrounds would be operated without segregation if the Federal agency wins control, the report declares:

"The men who enforce the segregation of colored citizens in the Nation's Capital go all the way. They reach down to the playgrounds, and keep children from playing together."

Noting, however, that there are some Federally operated recreation areas, it adds, "there are still areas in Washington, beyond the reach of the District Recreation Board, where the American flag does not stand for race bigotry."

Recreation Board Chairman Harry Wender said last night that "of course I agree with the ultimate objectives of this report. There is some material that is extremely valuable. Other material is not new to Washington. After skimming through it he said, "I noted that some of their references to recreation are similar to those in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, and which we found to be without justification. Unfortunately, none of the researchers ever approached the board." However, he said he would examine the report "with great interest, and the hope I can comment on it more fully later."

In the "basic" discrimination in the schools, the researchers said they found:

"The schools for colored children are inferior to those for whites . . . Negro schools are too few in number and too small in size . . . Negro schools are short of teachers.

"From elementary school to high school, the pupil load of Negro teachers in 1946 was 12 to 30 per cent higher than for white teachers. Most Negro teachers had 800 or more pupil-hours per week. Only one white teacher in 20 had this heavy a load. Yet these segregated schools for colored children are supposed to be "separate and equal."

In higher education, the report stated, Georgetown University has started to admit a few Negroes to its law school. But "the only 'white' college that does not discriminate against Negroes in the Capital is Catholic University, which lifted its color bar a few years ago. The experiment in equal opportunity has proved successful . . ."

In the Federal Government, the researchers said, there are three general types of racial discrimination.

"First, there is the exclusion pattern. Under it Negroes are hired only for the menial jobs that whites will not accept. It is typified by the State Department, the Justice Department, the Bureau of the Budget, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Reserve Board and various other independent agencies.

"Second, there is the segregation pattern. It is typified by the Government's "factories" which employ many Negroes but keep them in the lowest routine jobs in separate units. The Census Bureau, the Government Printing Office, and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing belong in this group.

"Third, there is the integration pattern—where jobs are open to Negroes at all levels on equal terms. It is extremely rare, and was largely a wartime phenomenon. War agencies like the Office of Price Administration and the National War Labor Board made some approaches to this practice."

Members of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital said they plan to distribute the segregation report widely through national organizations.

The committee yesterday authorized Dr. Shuster to appoint a "continuation committee" to "evaluate reaction" to the report, "appraise progress made as a result," and publish the full-scale volume of research findings next spring.

Then, said Dr. Lohman, "the real mission of the committee will be to make a summary of possible courses of action in the light of this evaluation. Alternatives will be handed to the "full committee," he said, "for instituting an 'action program.'"

Morse Calls for End Of Airport Segregation

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), a guest at yesterday's luncheon of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital, declared:

"The President of the United States has my full support again in the Eighty-first Congress in this matter of civil rights."

As a prompt display of presidential civil rights action, Senator Morse called on the President to "remove the blot of segregation at the National Airport immediately." At the last session of Congress, the Department of Commerce sought legislation to end racial discrimination at the airport restaurant. Morse said he firmly believes this can be done "ad administrative action . . . without legislation."

Pa. Students Picket Barbers

State College, Pa., Dec. 19 (AP).—Refusal of downtown barbers to cut the hair of Negro students of the Pennsylvania State College brought pickets to their doorways today.

White students started the demonstration in front of six barber shops and were joined later in the day by Negroes.

"Let your hair grow—cultivate democracy," said a placard carried by one of the pickets. Another sign read: "Jim Crow must go—end discrimination."

The campus chapter of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People said the boycott was called after Mitchell Williams, a Negro track star from Philadelphia, was denied a haircut.

The barbers themselves declined to comment. They continued business as usual. Customers ignored the demonstration.

There are no barber shops on the college campus. Practically all of the 10,000 men and women students go downtown shops for hair care. The 60 Negro students journey to Tyrone, 30 miles away, for their haircuts. Some of them have had their hair cut by other students.

35 Committeemen Hear Race Report

About one-third of the members of the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital were in Washington yesterday when that group's segregation report was released.

Most of them indicated full agreement with the report's findings, while some expressed the wish that it had been presented in a different form, or with different "stresses."

At least three other members of the 91-member national committee who could be reached last night said they had not yet read the report.

Dr. Joseph D. Lohman, who directed the research, said "about 35" national committee members at a meeting here yesterday voted unanimously to approve the report.

He said the group which met here yesterday adopted a motion which states in part, resolved, "That the national committee receives and accepts the report presented by the research staff and . . . that the national committee authorizes the release to the press of the United States of the pamphlet entitled "Segregation in Washington."

Several of the committee members indicated strong support of the report at their meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Said Dr. George N. Shuster, committee chairman:

"Nearly as is humanly possible this report is objective. It has no axes to grind . . . It is an examination of the American people as a whole."

Said Charles H. Houston, Washington attorney:

"Seven years after the Civil War we had a broader base for civil rights than we have today. About 1901," he said, referring to the date when a civil rights act for the District apparently was stricken from local statutes, "we reached as Negro citizens the lowest political depths to which we have ever sunk.

"What we are asking in substance is not something new, but a return to the old faith."

The Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal bishop of Washington and another member of the national committee, said:

"Without in any way committing myself to every detail, I feel that these are conditions we must look at, these great, ugly social facts.

"The wrong of these facts is rooted deeply in our community," he said. "I would have been happier if this report had acknowledged that."

Bishop Dun added:

"I personally believe the report would have been stronger—and fairer—if it indicated that real estate leaders and businessmen are in fact profoundly conditioned in their economic thinking and actions by the prejudices of this community.

Said Prof. Louis Wirth, president of the American Council on Race Relations:

"We are not pointing an accusing finger at the people of the District, we are pointing it at ourselves . . . We must hope that this Capital will not secede from this Nation, and that this Nation will not secede from the human race."

Said James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO: "We sincerely believe in the house of labor that we first must put our own house in order to speak on this topic. We must also put our Nation's Capital in order to speak to the rest of the world."

One member of the national committee, Mrs. Harry Bingham of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times, said she objected to the "tone" of some of the writing in the report.

"I don't feel the report was written in as disinterested a style as is desirable on such a controversial subject," she said. "It appeared to be a piece of special pleading."

Screen Actor Melvyn Douglas, also a member of the committee, said he had "just finished a picture," and had not "had a chance to look at the report because it just reached me."

Another committee member reached by telephone, Senator-elect Hubert H. Humphrey, former Mayor of Minneapolis, said, "I received a copy about four days ago, but haven't had a chance to study it."

Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, also reserved comment because he had not read the report.

The racial situation in Washington was called "a blot upon the life of the Nation and a danger to our world position" by Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University. He said "it cannot fail to arouse the interest of thoughtful citizens throughout the Nation and to eventuate legislative measures."

The Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, former cannon of Washington Cathedral, said he considered the report was "extremely valuable and presented very objectively and fairly." He hoped the report "will be very carefully considered by members of Congress, the commissioners and the people of the District of Columbia."

G. Howland Shaw, former Assistant Secretary of State, praised the "conscientious" job done by researchers the report, and added:

"The fact that we voted to accept it shows that we considered the picture it gives an accurate picture."

The Rev. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, had this comment:

"After being in Europe a year, I feel the American people ought to be very grateful for any steps taken to overcome this undemocratic situation which has brought severe criticism from other nations."

Chatelain, Connaughton Unavailable for Comment

Leon Chatelain, jr., president of the Board of Trade, and J. H. Connaughton, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, could not be reached for comment on the statements in the report about their organizations.

Asked for reaction to statements in the report about discrimination among Government workers, Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, said he had not read the report, having "just received it today."

VA Eases Rules For Paralyzed Veterans' Homes

The Veterans Administration yesterday made it easier for paralyzed veterans to obtain grants for specially designed homes.

The agency said liberalized regulations will make it possible for some veterans who could not qualify before to get grants.

A law authorizes the VA to make 50 per cent grants up to $10,000 for paralyzed veterans in buying homes. They must be paralyzed from the hips down.

Under the old regulation, it was stipulated that a veteran to be eligible must have lost his bowel and bladder functions. As now worded, the regulation merely requires that a veteran be paralyzed from the hips down and unable to walk without aids, such as crutches.

Only one paralyzed veteran so far has obtained final approval for a grant. This was for $9500. The VA had approved 123 other applications, but they had not been fully processed. It had turned down 80 applications, and 863 were pending.

U. S. Denies Envoy Aided Overthrow Of Gallegos

The United States yesterday denied the charge by exiled Venezuelan President Romulo Gallegos that the United States military attache at Caracas acted on behalf of the military forces which overthrew him.

Gallegos had demanded an "explanation" from this Government over the presence of the military attache, Col. Edward F. Adams, at the Caracas army barracks during the November 24 military revolt.

The State Department said it had been informed by Walter J. Donnelly, American Ambassador to Venezuela, that Adams visited the Ministry of National Defense on November 24. But it said he merely inquired if there were any news from the United States air attache, Lieut. Col. Frank T. Bender, who was in a sparsely populated region hunting for a lost American military plane.

D. C. Once Had Equal Rights

Segregation in the Nation's Capital, quotes a New York Times report of 1904 which states:

"In Washington the Negro . . . has greater advantages than elsewhere in the Union . . . the law requires that he shall be permitted if he can afford to do so, to eat in the best restaurants, sleep in the best hotels, and be admitted to the best theaters patronized by whites."

Remember Theatergoing

The segregation report notes that the law "around the turn of the century . . . mysteriously disappeared from the compiled statutes of the District . . ." and adds, "Since there is no record of its repeal, some lawyers speculate that it may still be technically in full force and effect."

It also states, "Negroes still living in Washington can remember attending downtown theaters."

No reference to theaters is made in the law of 1872 as shown in West's records. The law appears under the category "Crimes and Offenses," and provides the stiff penalty of $100 fine and the year's loss of a business license for violation of its civil rights provisions.

These penalties apply to "any restaurant keeper or proprietor, any hotel keeper or proprietor, proprietors or keepers of ice-cream saloons or places where soda water is kept for sale, or keepers of barber shops and bathing houses, refusing to sell or wait upon any respectable well-behaved person without regard to race, creed, color, or previous condition of servitude . . ."

The 1872 law further requires such accommodation must be "in the same room, and at the same prices as other well-behaved and respectable persons are served . . ."

The segregation report notes that during the administration of Grover Cleveland, "well-to-do colored people were served at some of the best restaurants run by whites. Occasionally Negroes were in the role of hosts. One of Washington's most exclusive hotels was the Wormley House (at 15th and H sts.), which catered to family patronage and the congressional and diplomatic set. It was owned and managed by a colored man, James Wormley."

Negro Rights To Magothy Homes Upheld

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Following a United States Supreme Court ruling, the Maryland Court of Appeals today decided in favor of two Negro families that had moved into a fashionable white waterfront development.

The tribunal, Maryland's highest, ruled "restrictive covenants," unenforceable in court. It tossed out such an agreement involving the waterfront development along the Magothy River between Baltimore and Annapolis.

The agreement contained a clause banning sale to anyone of "Negro, Chinese, and Japanese descent."

The Supreme Court ruled last May such covenants may be made but cannot be enforced. Chief Judge Ogle Marbury wrote for the Maryland court.

"If the Supreme Court did not mean what it said, or said more than it should, or what it should not have said, then the responsibility is its, and not ours.

"The decisions or the Supreme Court . . . are binding on this court and, once definitely made, as in this case, must be followed by us."

The Appeals Court upheld the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court in dismissing a suit brought by white neighbors to expel the Rev. and Mrs. Hiram E. Smith, Negroes, from a 65-acre tract they bought in 1943. In that purchase, the restrictive covenant was omitted from the deed.

Reversing the County Court, the Appeals judges dismissed a suit to put the Smiths and Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Saunders off house lots in the same area. This part of the 100-acre development was covered by restrictive covenants.

Royall Estimates Red Prison Camps Hold 13 Million

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Secretary of the Army Royall said tonight the best estimates are that Russia has 13 million persons "confined in death-dealing concentration camps."

He used that figure in discussing the recent Berlin government balloting. In that election, Royall said, 1,300,000 German voters, "although living virtually within a stone's throw of ruthless Soviet troops and Soviet-controlled police . . . marched boldly to the polls and cast their ballots in favor of a chance for democratic freedom, cast them against a cruel and oppressive regime."

Royall, who will leave Saturday night on a European trip that will include a visit to Berlin, expressed his views in an address prepared for the New York Southern Society.

Segregation In Schools Is Assailed

Abolish racial segregation in Washington's public schools, Negro petitioners asked the United States Court of Appeals yesterday.

In attempts to force authorities to open all local schools to Negro students, attorneys for Browne Junior High School pupils argued that their civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution are being violated here daily.

The Appeals Court action is a result of dismissal in the District Court of an injunction suit aimed at a court degree to guarantee a nonsegregation school policy.

Hearing the appeals are Judges Henry W. Edgerton, Bennett Champ Clark and E. Barrett Prettyman.

In one of the cases heard, James C. Carr, father of student Marguerite Daisy Carr, sued school authorities on the ground they had no right to bar her from attending Eliot Junior High School, designated for white students. At the time of the original suit, Browne located on 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., had a double-shift schedule and Marguerite attended classes between 8:30 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. Her attorneys claim she was entitled to the full 9-3 schoolday under the law.

The other case was brought by the Parent-Teacher Association of Browne Junior High and individual parents and students.

The court took the cases under advisement.

Jurisdiction Solution Sets Suspect Free

Half a dozen law enforcement agencies finally settled a question of jurisdiction over an alleged robbery on Arlington Ridge rd., Arlington, yesterday, but a reputed "sure suspect" had to be released for "insufficient evidence."

Robbery Squad Detective Murray Kutner and Herbert Young said Julius Kahn, 21, of Far Rockaway, N. Y., salesman for an evening gown manufacturer, complained he was robbed of $25 and a wrist watch and tossed from an automobile by a man with whom he went riding after they had some drinks together on 9th st. here.

Kutner and Young said they scouted around and arrested a "sure suspect." They said Arlington County Police said the section of "No Man's Land" where the robbery reportedly occurred was under either the National Parks Service or Alexandria Police, but both the latter said it was under the Army. The Army's criminal investigation division referred the detectives to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Finally the United States Attorney at Richmond, by telephone, accepted jurisdiction but, on hearing the policemen's story, said he would be glad to handle the matter but he deemed the evidence against the "sure suspect" as insufficient, according to Kutner and Young.

Brundage Hits Many Changes In Tax Laws

By S. Oliver Goodman

Creation of a permanent board, independent of the Treasury Department, to study tax problems was advocated last night by Percival F. Brundage, president of the American Institute of Accountants.

Brundage

Brundage, addressing the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants in the Mayflower, decried frequent changes in tax laws as "detrimental to business and making it difficult for business to plan ahead."

Disturbing business at present, he said, are reports that corporate taxes may be increased and that excess profits taxes may be reimposed.

Previous experience has shown that an excess profits tax "such as that ended three years ago encourages inefficiency and laxity in control of corporate expenditures," he pointed out.

"The competent operator is penalized in comparison with the less efficient. While aimed at profiteers, the tax actually affects them little, as they seem able to avoid it. Instead it hits the principal industrial companies, upon whom the progress of our economy depends and a large part of whose earnings must be retained in order to maintain our free enterprise system."

Commenting on reports of a possible increase in corporation taxes, Brundage said: "If the corporate tax rate should have to be raised, it is very important that adequate deductions be allowed for depreciation. I think that some allowance should be made for consumption of plant in use at current values. The higher the tax rates, the more important it is that only real profits be taxed."

Guests at the dinner meeting included local representatives of business, banking, government, life insurance and the legal profession. Presiding was Benjamin F. Regardie, president of the local institute. Edward M. Tyler, oldest living past president of the local group, made a brief address.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the week ended December 4 were 3 per cent under the same 1947 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Local dollar volume in the four weeks ended December 4 slipped 2 per cent under the like period last year. Regionally, store sales in the Fifth Federal District dropped 6 per cent for the week and were 5 per cent down for the four-week period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: James M. Johnston, partner in the Washington investment banking firm of Johnston, Lemon & Co., has been elected a director of State Loan & Finance Corp. . . . Marion Harper, jr., is the new president of McCann-Erickson, Inc., advertising agency. He succeeds H. K. McCann, who was elevated to board chairman . . . John E. Slater has resigned as chairman of American Overseas Airlines, Inc. . . . Asa V. Call, head of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co., is the new president of Life Insurance Association of America . . . Carl Byoir, public relations counsel, has been elected a director of Schenley Industries, Inc.

BACHE BONUS: Bache & Co. yesterday announced a Christmas bonus of two weeks' extra pay for all employes with more than one year's service. Registered representatives will receive $100 each. This is much more than was distributed last year. There are 17 employes in Bache's Washington branch.

ODD LOTS: Commerce Department reported chain store and mail order sales increased 9 per cent in October over the same month last year, but were slightly lower than in September after taking into account seasonal fluctuations . . . The American Bankers Association has issued a new edition of "Present Day Banking, 1948-1949" to supply reference information for bankers and businessmen . . . National Tea Co. has purchased a Chicago war surplus plant, formerly used for aircraft engine manufacture, for four million dollars . . . Alaska salmon pack, smallest since 1927, is valued at 96 million dollars, largest in history.

DEBT: The Federal, State and local government debt averages out to $1848 for each man, woman and child in the Nation. The Census Bureau reports that the three governmental divisions owed close to 271 billion dollars last June 30. The Federal debt was down 2.3 per cent from the previous year, States up 25 per cent and cities up 9.4 per cent.

AD JUDGES NAMED: The National Retail Dry Goods Association announced the appointment of a jury of judges to select the 100 best retail newspaper advertisements of 1948. The winning selections of the judges will be exhibited at the association's annual convention in New York in January. "The annual contest this year," said Howard P. Abrahams, manager of the NRDGA sales promotion division, "has been expanded to include the direct sponsorship of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association. Several NAEA members will participate as judges."

Tanker Planes Help B-50 Fly 9400 Miles

Flying service stations will enable bombers to make non-stop flights around the world, the Air Force said yesterday in announcing a 9400-mile round trip test hop from Texas to Hawaii.

The flight was made December 7-8 by a four-engine B-50 bomber. "Tanker" planes refueled it three times on the 40-hour trip that started and ended in Fort Worth, Tex.

It was the first major demonstration of a new refueling technique to stretch the range of strategic bombers.

At the same time the B-50, something like the war-tested B-29 but with longer range, bomb load and speed, was making the hop a huge six-engine B-36 was making a non-stop flight over virtually the same route without refueling.

Air Secretary Symington revealed the B-50 flight in an address before the executive club in Chicago.

He said it would be possible to fly a modern bomber around the world non-stop "by the relatively simple process of refueling in the air."

The B-50 left Carswell base, Fort Worth, and made a circuitous flight to the Hawaiian Islands and return. The Air Force said sizable useful bomb loads were dropped at about the half way point.

Three refueling contacts were made with B-29 type planes converted into flying tankers tankers.

The Air Force plans to continue development of this air-to-air system of refueling. It was learned that six groups of bombers will be used.

They would consist of 45 bombers and 20 tankers.

Symington said last winter that aerial tankers would be in operational use late this year or early in 1949.

Yugoslav Monarch

Hard Times Beset Exiled King Peter

New York, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Exiled King Peter of Yugoslavia looked down at his scuffed brown shoes today and said his finances have dwindled so he can barely make royal ends meet.

As king and ruler of 16 million subjects, Peter used to be surrounded by all the wealth to which monarchs are accustomed. Now that the Communists have taken over Yugoslavia and seized his property, he is just plain Peter Karageorgeovitch, 25, a young man who doesn't even have a home he can call his castle.

Peter travels constantly in France, Britain and the United States, with his wife and son and a maid, a nurse, an aide and a lady-in-waiting.

Although Peter has been living off his resources for seven years, he does not plan to go to work as did his great-great-grandfather, who herded sheep in the Yugoslav hills.

"I haven't got enough money to invest in any business," he said, "and I have no plans to work."

The exiled couple and their entourage arrived Wednesday on the Queen Mary. Peter is scheduled to speak on Yugoslavia at Town Hall next week.

Woman Guilty Of Slapping School Head

Mrs. Jeannette McCray, 28, pleaded guilty yesterday to slapping a grade school principal in a dispute over a broken light globe.

In mitigation, Mrs. McCray's attorney, Franklin T. Miles commented the slap "was the reaction of all women since time immemorial to any insult."

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell of Municipal Court referred the case to the probation office for presentence investigation.

Miss Marie Turner, 48, principal of the Burrough's school said that the incident arose last June when Mrs. McCray's son, Wilson, 10, was among a group of boys who apparently had broken a light globe at the school. Miss Turner suggested that the boys pay $2 out of their allowances for the globe, she said.

According to Miss Turner, Mrs. McCray appeared at the school, demanded the boy's report card and a receipt for the $2. In the ensuing argument, Miss Turner was slapped, it was said.

Mrs. McCray who resides at 2006 Lawrence st. ne., sued for the $2 but the case was dismissed in September.

35-Pound Turkey On Way to Truman

Minneapolis, Dec. 10 (AP).—A 35-pound Minnesota turkey starts its final flight today—via plane for the Christmas table at the White House.

The bird, a broad-breasted bronze young tom, will be presented to President Truman Monday, Craydon McCully, Maple Plain (Minn.) president of the National Turkey Federation, will take the bird to the Executive Mansion. It was raised by Clint Moline, veteran Isanti (Minn.) grower.

Nolan Gets Life In Slaying of Arlington Man

James Thomas Nolan, 24, former Arlington dry cleaning store employe, was given a life sentence in the Virginia State Penitentiary yesterday for the Armistice Day murder of Belmont Woodridge.

The sentence was imposed by Judge J. R. H. Alexander in Fauquier County Circuit Court at Warrenton.

The bullet-riddled body of the slaying victim, a 44-year-old, well-to-do salesman of 803 North Wayne st., Arlington, was found beneath a pile of leaves four miles north of Warrenton after Nolan led police to the scene six days after the slaying.

Nolan also received a 20-year term for taking Woodridge's car, clothing and bonds after the killing. He had pleaded guilty to both the first-degree murder and the robbery charges.

In imposing sentence, Judge Alexander said he was giving Nolan life instead of the electric chair because of his complete confession to police and aid in solving the case.

Until Nolan led police to the body of the slain ambulance and hearse salesman on November 17, officials had not known of Woodridge's murder.

Police said the two men were driving in Woodridge's Cadillac convertible to Cincinnati, headquarters of the salesman's firm, when Nolan shot Woodside six times with a .32-caliber pistol near Warrenton. Nolan, according to police, earlier had promised to buy several ambulances from Woodridge.

BUSY GAL, TOO—Alexis Smith, who usually isn't associated with such frivolity, shakes a mean can-can in Warner's soon-to-be-seen "South of St. Louis." Alexis next comes to the Warner next week, "The Decision of Christopher Blake," from the Moss Hart play on divorce

A Question of Casting

Aristophanes Comedy at C. U. Afflicted by a Rare Disease

THE ENERGETIC Walter Kerr of Catholic University's speech and drama department has devised a new acting version of Aristophanes' comedy, "The Birds," now holding the stage of the campus theater.

Mr. Kerr, who knows his theater and its history, has emphasized the fantastical quality of this story about two Athenians who concoct with the birds a scheme to make them greater than the gods.

Unlike most of the Aristophanes comedies, "The Birds" is sheer fantasy and lacks the topical allusions which made the writer the Moss Hart of his day. In his version, Kerr carries out the thorough-going buffoonery the Athenians evidently relished and there is a briskness about his touch that hints the play is in steady hands.

On the negative side of the C. U. production, however, is a frantic, forced quality that I'm sure did not appear on paper. Much of this strained effort lies, I think, in the casting of the two important leads, Pithetaerus, the Footloose, and Euelpides, the Footsore, the Athenian gents who make the deal with the birds. The one is too wooden; the other is a fourth carbon of Willie Howard. Miscasting at C. U. is a rare disease, but I think that's where the trouble lies in the present instance.

Kerr's adaptation reminds you that Olson and Johnson reached across many centuries for their energetic fun. Remarks to the audience and fellow actors are in the Athenian tradition, and had the device not been so thoroughly overworked in recent years on our stage, perhaps the effect might appear more spontaneous.

As it is, the satire is fun. Though Footloose and Footsore condemn the ways of their fellow Athenians, once they have worked out their alliance with the birds and founded Cloud Cuckoodom, they do all they can to keep the bores and selfishly ambitious from destroying their Utopia. But the two can't be satisfied and aim at taking precedence over the gods. By intercepting the stream of burnt offerings from Mount Olympus, they starve the gods into a compromise. Neptune, Hercules and a barbarian god work out a deal that gives a baby-voiced goddess, Iris, to Footloose as his bride.

Interspersed here and there—again well in the tradition—are the dances and choral recitation once dear to Athenian playgoers. Joan Lea Walsh leads these incidents in dance, and the chorus is, as usual, splendidly coached by Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan. The group's splendid speech is invariably an inspiration. No microphones, very little studied intonation—just good, clear, rounded speech. Dr. Callan is indeed invaluable.

The large company affords a costume designer's field day, with Betty Moeslein in charge of this department and James Waring as scenic and lighting designer, a post at which he shines. Of the performances, I thought Jill Leahy's Iris the most amusingly adept.

The play continues through the eighteenth in the campus theater, tomorrow night excepted. For reservations, call Michigan 6000, extension 357 or 358.—R. L. C.

One on the Aisle—

Near-Great Play Is Pushed Around

By Richard L. Coe

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—"The Young and Fair," a new play by N. Richard Nash, is a comprehensive picture of what's wrong with the American theater today.

Here is a drama which for all its faults is a considerably more intresting play than the big town's top hit, "Light Up the Sky." Mr. Nash did not write his story as well as he should have and he made an essential error in the characterization of two leading figures. But it commanded respectful, if not highly laudatory reviews.

It is splendidly acted by an all-feminine cast, headed by Washington's Frances Starr. It has been brilliantly directed by Harold Clurman (who is, incidentally, drama critic of the New Republic), in an imaginative three-room setting by Paul Morrison. It is, in short, the sort of play you talk about long after the curtain is down. In the words of one reviewer, it "just misses being a great play by inches."

Yet, its life expectancy is not great. The Fulton Theater, where it closes tonight, has been leased to a movie firm. After the first week one of the leading actresses departed for Hollywood. And because its weekly intake is not over what's called a "stop figure" of $12,000, its move to another house in the crowded Broadway area has become a complicated real estate problem.

By every form of logic it is a play which would engross many playgoers, but the illogic of the theater has reached such a height that the chances for this are slight.

At the moment there is a chance it will reopen in a few weeks. Producer Vinton Freedley and his associate, Richard Krakeur, have arranged to take over the International Theater, but since this house hasn't been used for months, it will take several weeks of preparation. Its added disadvantage is that it's up at Columbus Circle, over the hit borderline.

Complexly Woven

The story concerns the headmistress of a girls' school, one of her instructors and some of the girls. In a complex weave of relationships (in which there is a healthy lack of unhealthy attachments), Nash shows us that the headmistress has held on to the school she founded 40 years before by compromises all along the line. She has temporized to achieve her ends. To placate the trustees (whom she formed to help her weather the depression), she puts up with petty tyrannies. She accepts only "gentiles," although this is against her personal credo. She sacrifices a minor employe to cover up a kleptomaniac. She destroys her assistant, an alumna of ideals, who has come back to teach at the school. She expels the alumna's sister to save the face of a valued trustee's egomaniacal daughter.

There is a good deal of incident in the play, perhaps too much. But the playwright's essential fault lies in his supposition that after 40 years of such experiences some of the problems would so defeat his headmistress and that so intelligent an alumna as her assistant would be so hazy about the workings of the school. Granted, his story is essentially the collapse of the headmistress because of her lifetime of compromise, but it might have been detailed more convincingly in his plot.

Frances Starr Heads Cast

As I say, the cast is splendid. Miss Starr, too long absent, acts the tragic Miss Cantry, a role of compounded despair, with the graceful sincerity for which she is famous. It is an exacting role and it is not Miss Starr's fault that one is inclined to question some of the lady's rattled reactions.

The many young ladies in the cast have splendid opportunities. Julie Harris has a fine scene as the kleptomaniac; Patricia Kirkland (daughter of Nancy Carroll and Playwright Jack Kirkland) and Audra Lindley are the student-teacher sisters, and a striking-looking girl named Doe Avedon is the frenzied female fuehrer. Lois Wheeler, so fine in "All My Sons," again displays her able gifts.

These young actresses, if they really want to be actresses, should be working, but an incident the week the play opened stresses their temptations. Mercedes MacCambridge, who created the returned alumna role, broke loose for one of those Hollywood-option contracts, which, if your options hold, is one way to make money but no way to become an actress.

Costs Rise, Income Same

The loss of the Fulton to the movies is another problem the living theater has to contend with in New York as elsewhere. The production cost is three times what it would have been a decade ago, though the prices for seats are virtually the same. A good deal more money goes out of the theater nowadays, but the income remains much what it has been for years.

Out-of-town tryouts are no longer the paying propositions they once were; until a play is an established hit, the road is wary. This lack of "settling" time usually results in a play that's had a fair reception closing without alterations. But in the case of "The Young and Fair," cuts are still being made, resulting in a more tightly-knit play than the powerful nine aisle-sitters reviewed.

There was a time when there was a place for the play that was in between failure and sensational success. Since there's no denying the skill, ingenuity and essential vitality of the American professional theater at its best, that time will come again. But how long, O Cataline?

Methodists Back ERP Continuance

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP). The Board of Missions and Church Extensions of the Methodist Church today unanimously indorsed continuation of the Marshall Plan provided it does not become a "military lend-lease program for the rearming of western Europe."

The 200 board members, including 40 bishops, said in a resolution:

"We respectfully urge that the European Recovery Program, commonly known as the Marshall Plan, be kept strictly to its original objectives of relief and rehabilitation."

In other actions ending a four-day conclave the board:

1. Adopted a $10,335,326 budget for the year beginning June 1, 1949. It is the largest budget ever set by the board.

2. Urged continuance of negotiations between Russia and the United States "on all possible levels looking toward establishment of peace treaties and easing of tensions in central Europe and the Far East."

3. Reaffirmed the "historic policies of methodism" to continue missionary work in China regardless of possible danger.

4. Indorsed President Truman's decision to ask the Eighty-first Congress to provide 16 million dollars for relief of Arab refugees.

5. Insisted that "the nations of the world should refrain from unilateral policies and actions in international affairs which endanger world peace" and work through the United Nations for settlement of all problems.

Dr. James Miers Heads Aid Society

Dr. James H. Miers, pastor of Fourth Presbyterian Church, 13th and Fairmont sts. nw., has been named president of the Washington branch of the American Waldensian Aid Society.

He succeeds Mrs. Edward C. Stone, who retired from the presidency after a 10-year term. Other officers are Miss Mary Y. Wheeler, the Rev. Charles Carhart, Mrs. Lee Latimer, the Rev. James C. Fahl, Mrs. William Blanchet and Mrs. Maud L. Girts.

Miss Robinson Gets Church Post

Miss Grace E. Robinson, assistant director of finances and accounts of the District public schools, has been elected treasurer of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 301 A st. se.

She succeeds the late Henry P. Blair, who was treasurer of the church from 1916 until his death October 3. Miss Robinson is the thirteenth woman to be named treasurer of one of the 90 churches in the Washington Episcopal Diocese.

Latter Day Saints Stake Plans Change

The reorganization of the Washington Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will take place at the quarterly conference of the Stake at the chapel, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw., today and Sunday.

Clark

J. Reuben Clark, jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah, one of three members of the first presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will preside at the meetings.

The Stake, comparable to a diocese, includes about 10 congregations in the Greater Washington area, Richmond, Va.; Baltimore, Md., and Waynesboro, Pa.

Present officers of the local stake are Edgar B. Brossard, member of the Tariff Commission, president; Ernest L. Wilkinson, attorney, first counselor, and J. Willard Marriott, president of Hot Shoppes, Inc., second counselor.

Matthew Conley and Mark Peterson, two of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles of the church, also will be here for the meetings. Officers are nominated by the apostles and voted upon locally.

Meetings at 10 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. Sunday will be open to the public.

Clark served as Undersecretary of State during the administration of President Herbert Hoover and was formerly Ambassador to Mexico. He later was one of the United States delegates to the Pan-American conference in Montevideo in 1933.

Third Dialogue Forum Set on 'Why Believe?'

The third in a series of "Why Believe?" dialogue forums will be presented by the Paulist Fathers Tuesday, December 14, at 8:15 p. m. at the Catholic Daughters of American Club, 2 Scott cir.

The Rev. A. J. Burggraff, professor of science at St. Paul's College, will speak on "Miracles Are Possible," giving the viewpoint of science. The Rev. Albert A. Murray of New York, editor of Information Magazine, will discuss miracles in general under the title "Purpose of Miracles."

The Rev. Edwin Butler Kron of Washington will present color pictures, giving the viewpoint of the artist, in a talk entitled "The Sign of Divinity." The three talks will be followed by a question period.

Paulist dialogue forums present the Catholic teaching on miracles and an attitude toward personal divine providence.

This forum is sponsored by the Share the Faith Department of Court District of Columbia No. 212, Catholic Daughters of America. The meeting is open to the public.

Pope Blesses Golden Wedding

Papal blessing was bestowed upon Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Manganaro last Sunday when the couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at Holy Rosary Church, 229 F se. nw.

The blessing was read by the Rev. Nicholas DeCarlo of Holy Rosary, and the Manganaros' son, the Rev. Peter Francis Manganaro, gave the benediction.

The couple were married in Melito Porto Salvo, Italy, came to the United States for a honeymoon and have lived here since. Their home is at 5236 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The Mysteries of God

The Rev. Paul L. Reaser, pastor, will speak on "The Mysteries of God" at 9 and 11 a. m. Sunday at Atonement Lutheran Church, Rhode Island ave. and North Capitol st.

In Area Churches

Yule Music To Feature Services

Traditional music of the Christmas season will be featured Sunday at church services in the Greater Washington area.

Georg Friedrich Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," will be presented at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, and Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

At St. John's Church, the performance will be at 7:30 p. m., and the combined choirs of the church and a chamber orchestra from the Army Air Forces Band will participate.

Combined choirs of Calvary Church will be assisted by the Westminster Choir College orchestra of Princeton, N. J., in the presentation of the Handel oratorio. The service will begin at 7:50 p. m. and the performance will be carried over Station WOL beginning at 8:15 p. m.

At Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., the second in a series of Sunday evening musical programs will be given by the children's and youth choirs at 8 p. m. The Christmas story of Good King Wenceslaus will be dramatized with a musical background.

A Christmas vesper service will be sponsored by the church school of Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw. at 4 p. m. The program is entitled "Behold the Star" and will feature special music by the youth choir.

Dean Warner Lawson will direct the Howard University Choir in a Christmas musical at 5:30 and 8:30 p. m. in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel at Howard.

"The Christ Child," a Christmas cantata, will be sung by the chancel choir of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle, at 8 p. m.

The congregation of Petworth Methodist Church, 33 Grant Circle, nw., will join the three combined choirs in the annual Christmas carol service at 8 p.m.

A Yuletide concert will be given by the choir of Congress Heights Presbyterian Church, South Capitol and Chesapeake sts., at 8 p.m. Earlier, at 4:30 p.m., the choir will sing at vespers at St. Barnabas Church, Silver Hill, Md.

Bishop's Death To Be Marked In Rites Here

The 400th anniversary of the death of Fray Juan de Zumarraga, first Bishop of Mexico City, will be observed by the Academy of American Franciscan History of Washington Sunday and Monday.

Appointed Protector of the Indians by the Spanish Queen, Zumarraga founded schools for the natives and sought to get humanitarian treatment for them. He brought the first printing press to the New World and his "Doctrina Breve," issued in 1544, was the first book printed in North or South America.

Liturgical commemoration of his death will be on Sunday, the feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe. Mass will be celebrated in the chapel of Trinity College, Catholic University, at 10 a. m.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will be the celebrant, and dignitaries of the Franciscan Order from the United States and Mexico will assist. The Rev. Alexander Wyse, superior of the Friary of Our Lady of Guadalupe, Bethesda, Md., and director of the Academy of American Franciscan History, will preach the sermon.

On Monday at 8 p. m. the academy will hold an academic session in Pilgrimage Hall at the Franciscan Monastery, 14th and Quincy sts. ne.

The Americas Award for 1948 will be conferred upon Dr. Pablo Martinez del Rio, Mexican archeologist, historian, and educator, at the meeting. The award, last given to former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, is presented at irregular intervals in recognition of outstanding contributions to inter-American good will.

Dr. del Rio served as secretary of the Mexican delegation to the International Congress of Educators at Havana in 1929, and has been dean and rector of the summer school of the National University. For many years he has been a sponsor of the Mexican-United States Institute. He is now professor of history and archeology at the National University.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, will preside at the academic session, representing the Most Rev. Patrick A. OBoyle, Archbishop of Washington. The candidate will be presented for the honor by the Rev. Dr. Roderick Wheeler, managing editor of The Americas, the review that sponsors the award. The citation, a hand-illuminated scroll, will be presented by Father Wyse.

Dr. Payton to Speak

Dr. Jacob Payton, correspondent for the Christian Advocate, Methodist magazine, will speak at 11 a. m. Sunday at Gorsuch Methodist Church, 4th and L sts. sw.

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

The Rev. Hubert S. Beckwith, assistant minister at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., will present Henry van Dyke's Christmas story, "The Other Wise Man," at 5 p. m. vesper services at the church.

Beckwith

At 11 a. m. the Rev. Dr. Carl Heath Kopf, the pastor, will speak on "The Word Made Flesh."

The flag of the District of Columbia will be carried in procession at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. at the Washington Cathedral, and prayers will be offered for the people and government of the District. Flags of every State and territory hang in the cathedral, and a different one is carried each week in the year.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, will be observed from 4 to 9 p. m. with a fellowship tea and reception in the church parlors, 1226 Vermont ave. nw. The five women's organizations of the church will be hostesses and religious films will be shown.

Customs of the times of Jesus will be portrayed in the film, "A Certain Nobleman," to be shown at Fair-Park Baptist Church, Seminary rd., Alexandria, at 7:30 p. m. Sunday. The Rev. Dr. E. H. Potts is pastor of the church.

Dr. Harvey L. Curtis will speak on "Religion in Government" before the Fellowship Class of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, 6401 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase, at 11 a. m. At the 9 and 11 a. m. worship services, the Rev. Dr. Clifford Homer Richmond will use as his topic, "Who Is This Jesus?"

Metropolitan A.M.E. Church will mark it 110th anniversary at services Sunday. The anniversary sermon will be preached at 11 a. m. by Dr. Charles E. Stewart, former pastor, and at 8 p. m. the Eastern Guild Players will present a play, "Whatsoever Ye Sow."

Gifts for the District Training School at Laurel, Md., will be brought to the annual church school Christmas party of the National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. The party will be held Sunday in the church social hall, 1308 Vermont ave. nw.

Episcopalians Study Modern Marriages

Marriage, 1949 model, is getting the once-over from study groups in Episcopal churches in the diocese of Washington.

"Successful Marriage and the Christian Family" is the official title of the discussion series, which is the first Family Study Program of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The total program, according to church officials, is an attempt to provide an opportunity for parents and youth to think together about the church and religion.

Eventually there will be a unified parish program. The marriage series is a beginning in which youth, young married people and more mature adults are joining in the discussion of the problems of modern marriage.

Four Pamphlets Issued

Four brief pamphlets have been issued by the National Council as guidebooks for marriage study groups.

In addition, a volume on how to organize a lively discussion has been published for use by group leaders.

The four study volumes are entitled: "Marriage: 1949 Model Versus Christian Marriage"; "Building a Successful Marriage"; "Personal Adjustments in Marriage"; and "How the Church Helps the Christian Family."

Written in a brief and readable style, the pamphlets mince no words in telling the facts. Sex is not taboo, in-law problems are frankly discussed, solutions for money problems are suggested.

But the books do not eliminate possibilities for discussion. Each one concludes with a series of suggested questions for group examination.

Discussions are informal and usually led by the rector with the assistance of one or more lay leaders. At St. Timothy's Chapel, 3601 Alabama ave. se., the Rev. John P. Coleman, vicar, and Leslie Hart, a layman, share the leadership.

Study Group Organized

The St. Timothy group began its study in October, and the young married people and college students in the group meet once a month for supper and lively talks. The Rev. Malcolm Marshall, chairman of the adult division of the Department of Christian Education of the Diocese and the rector of St. Margaret's Church spoke at the initial meeting.

At All Souls Memorial Church, Cathedral ave. and Woodley pl. nw., the discussions have been taking place on Sunday mornings under the leadership of the rector, the Rev. Frank Blackwelder.

Study groups are now being organized or are planned for January in the following Episcopal churches in the diocese: Esther Memorial, the Rev. Berry B. Simpson, rector; Grace, Silver Spring, the Rev. Francis M. Hamilton, rector; River Terrace Chapel, the Rev. Andrus B. Smith, vicar; St. Columba's, the Rev. C. Randolph Mengers, rector; St. John's, Georgetown, the Rev. William MacD Sharp, rector, and St. Margaret's, Mr. Marshall.

Rev. Olewiler to Urge Church Attendance

The Rev. Robert W. Olewiler, pastor of Grace Reformed Church, 15th and O sts. nw., will appear each Saturday at 5 p. m. on Station WASH-FM in a radio broadcast encouraging people to go to church.

The 15-minute program is called "One Word Can Change Your Life." Today Mr. Olewiler will speak on the word "block," answering the question "What kind of a block can I be in life?"

Truman Receives Mayors' Program

The United States Conference of Mayors six-point program emphasizing public housing was reportedly given a "cordial" reception by President Truman yesterday.

The program calls for:

1. Construction of 800,000 public housing units by 1953 (300,000 more than called for under the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

2. "Adequate and effective" rent controls until the housing shortage is relieved. This includes restoration of rent ceilings on apartment hotels.

3. An extensive slum-clearance program. The T-E-W bill, the mayors said, "makes a satisfactory beginning."

4. Inrceasing the present mortgage limit from $8100 a rental unit to $9500 on private housing financed under the Federal Housing Administration.

5. Federal aid for education. Cities, it was claimed, cannot carry the entire load.

6. Elimination of traffic bottlenecks in cities. The delegation urged that 50 per cent or more of funds under the present Federal Aid Highway Act be earmarked for city projects. Only 25 per cent is so marked now.

A delegation of the mayors' organization, headed by Mayor George W. Welsh of Grand Rapids, Mich., called on the President yesterday. They outlined their program, and later Welsh said Mr. Truman gave it a "very favorable and very cordial" reception.

Welsh said Mr. Truman had not indicated to the delegation just what kind of housing program he will submit to the new Congress next month.

But the President's attitude on housing is familiar:

Mr. Truman has repeatedly indorsed the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, calling for public housing and slum clearance. This bill passed the Senate earlier this year, but died in the House. The modified housing bill finally adopted did not include these two items.

CITED BY CHIEF—Maj. Robert J. Barrett (right), Chief of Police, last night presented the monthly Award of Merit for October to four police privates attached to the Fourth Precinct. The four, who are credited with the arrest of two suspects in the holdup-slaying of a Washington druggist, are (from left) Pvts. Robert J. Reed, Norman Gray, Aldred F. Corfield and Milton E. Washington. The presentation was televised over WNBW

4 Privates Win Awards in 4th Precinct

Four police privates attached to the Fourth Precinct yesterday shared the monthly award of merit for October for their part in the arrest of two suspects in the murder of a Washington druggist.

They are Pvts. Robert J. Reed, Milton E. Washington, Alfred Corfield and Norman Gray.

The monthly presentation program was televised for the first time with a 15-minute ceremony being held during Johnny Bradford's Television Journal program on WNBW.

Given Gold Medals

The four men were presented gold medals by Supt. Robert J. Barrett and certificates by Inspector Floyd A. Truscott. I. William Hill, city editor of the Evening Star, read the citation accompanying the award.

The work of the four policemen resulted in the arrest of Lawrence Goodall, 24, of 412 Oakdale pl. nw., and Edward Jackson, jr., 25, of 364 Dixon ct. sw., as the alleged bandits who fatally shot Nathaniel Johnson, 53, in his drug store, 600 3d st. sw., the night of October 12.

Police officials cited the four privates as well as Detective Sergts. George W. Cooke and Richard Felber of the homicide squad for their work on the case.

First Break Following Day

According to the commanding officer of the Fourth Precinct, Capt. Paul L. Barnes, Gray and Corfield made the first break in the case when they picked up Jackson the day following the murder, acting on information they had received.

Reed and Washington were also doing some detecting. They tracked through a maize of information and finally came up with Goodall's name. As a result, Goodall was arrested at his home. They also were tipped off where the death weapon could be found and they recovered it.

Jackson, after being confronted with the gun used in the shooting, confessed his part in the crime, according to police.

Chest Units Move Into New Building

The Prince Georges County Community Chest will move today into a new building which makes it possible, for the first time since the Chest was formed in 1946, to house all of its agencies under a single roof.

The single-story structure at 3723 34th st., Mount Rainier, was built especially for the Chest by Herbert L. Reichelt, a member of its board of directors. The Chest will occupy the property under a long-term lease.

Offices will be maintained there for the Community Chest headquarters and Girl Scouts, both of which are moving in immediately, and for the Social Service League and Catholic Charities, which will move in after January 1. Desk space will be provided for the Boy Scouts, YMCA and Camp Fire Girls.

The building also has a small auditorium with seating capacity of 50 which will be available to Chest agencies and other county organizations.

Meanwhile, the Prince Georges Red Cross will hold an "open house" from 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday in its new headquarters at 4112 Hamilton st. in Hyattsville. The Red Cross Building was purchased at a cost of $21,000 and the Red Cross moved in about a month ago.

Nonexistent Street Basis Of Court Suit

A street that isn't there caused furrowed brows in Arlington Circuit Court yesterday.

The street in question, Lincoln st., exists only on county planning maps.

The court problem: Woodward & Lothrop wants to build a branch department store on a lot it bisects—and Attorney William E. Day objects.

Day, who lives near the proposed store location, insists he has certain "rights" in the nonexistent street and doesn't want it blocked off.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday heard the case outlined, with Vaughn & Usilton, Inc., owner of the lot, opposing Day.

The street—on the map—runs between S. Second and Fifth sts., off Old Glebe rd.

Day has been fighting for two years in courts to keep the store from being erected in his neighborhood. He maintains it would disrupt the neighborhood's residential nature.

Marriage Case Not Pressed

Counsel's office changed its policy to confidential letter-writing. Thus, to confidential letter-writing.

King said that he is making a record of each man warned. Repetitions of the offense will result in court action, he said.

"My policy in the cases here was suggested by a sermon where the speaker said, "Once a person is forewarned, that is enough,' " King announced.

There is a danger, King said, that if no report is made of a marriage by the minister, there will be no absolute proof of the marriage having been performed.

He said in one of the 13 cases yesterday, the minister admitted having filed a missing marriage return with the Marriage License Bureau just before contacting King.

He estimated that returns were lacking in perhaps a dozen of the 140 complaints made by the Marriage License Bureau. The majority of the complaints were caused by late returns, he said.

In many instances, the delay could be caused by mail handling or filing procedure, he acknowledged.

22 Get First Aid Certificates

Twenty-two firemen, policemen and rescue squad members who took a Red Cross first-aid course received certificates last night at the opening of a first-aid treatment station in Arlington County Fire Station No. 1, 1041 S. Edgewood st.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg officiated at the ceremony. The awards were presented by Harry Dye of the Red Cross.

Receiving the certificates were A. C. Scheffel, Harvey Mills, Frank Sussan, Joseph Clements, J. A. Sieber, Herbert Snoots, Carl Scheffel, Loren Scheffel, Robert Tubbs, Frank Beatty, Dayton Scheffel, Gordon Malkie, Clayton DeKay, George C. Beatty, Edward C. Kay, Leslie Shelton, Hymie Sher, Paul J. Snoots, John W. Spink, Robert F. Bartley, Ernest A. Summers and Francis Schulte.

Cafes to Limit Menu Frills During Inauguration Week

Hors d'oeuvres and other frills of fancy meals may be missing in many downtown restaurants during inaugural week.

Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, yesterday told Inaugural Committee Chairman Melvin D. Hildreth that "special menus might be prepared to hold down the number of courses in the interest of speeding up service."

Visitors and local residents may also be assured, Wilson said, that restaurants will keep their prices just as low as possible.

"We look at these affairs as a long-range program and have never hiked our prices during these special occasions," Wilson stated.

In other developments yesterday as Chairman Hildreth stepped up the tempo of final arrangements for Inaugural Day:

Richard Mansfield, concession chairman, announced that he was making application for the parking lot concession of the Armory. He said the lot will accommodate 1400 cars and will be available for both the President's Ball and gala concert.

John F. Morrissey, chairman of the ticket sales committee, revealed that Government employes had already bought 1000 tickets for a total of $3864 and expected them to purchase between 5000 and 6000 before next month. Tickets in the $2.50 to $6 price range are the only ones on sale at the present time, he added.

An additional set of 500 sets of special inaugural license plates were ordered for cars in the parade and those to be used to carry distinguished guests.

With the Capitol inaugural stands nearing completion, work began yesterday on the reviewing stand opposite the White House. The first loads of lumber were delivered by the firm of Skinker and Garrett which has built inaugural grandstands continuously since Woodrow Wilson's inauguration. James R. Skinker, a partner in the firm, said he expected to have the job finished by January 10.

Girard College Alumni Holds Yule Party Today

National Capital Chapter, Girard College (Philadelphia) Alumni, will hold its annual Christmas party at a luncheon from 1 to 3 p. m. today at the Elks Club, 919 H st. nw.

President Truman, an honorary member, has been invited, along with 70 members, their wives and children. Lee Pennington of the Federal Bureau of Investigation will speak; Santa Claus will present gifts to the children and the social welfare committee will give out its annual awards. Chapter President Jesse B. Manbeck will preside. Pat Patterson heads the special features committee. Frank Cardevilla will furnish the music.

Employment Reaches New November High

Employment in November reached a record high for that month, although it dipped slightly below the 60 million-job mark for the first time in six months.

The Census Bureau reported yesterday the number of civilians with jobs in November was 59,893,000, a drop of 241,000 from October but 1,123,000 above November of last year.

Rev. Toureille's Topic For French Service

The Rev. Pierre C. Toureille, pastor of the French Protestant Church of Washington, will speak on "Dieu Parla a Jean" at the French service at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Dorsey Elected By White House Photographers

George M. Dorsey of Warner-Pathe News was elected president of the White House Photographers Association last night at a meeting in the Willard Hotel. He succeeds Byron H. Rollins of the Associated Press.

Robert Clover of Acme News Pictures was elected vice president. Arthur E. Scott of International News Photos was reelected secretary, and Ollie Atkins of the Saturday Evening Post and The Washington Post, treasurer.

The new officers will be installed at the association's annual dinner in honor of the President at the Statler Hotel March 19.

Czar Action Deferred

Southern Officials Ask NCAA to Boost Aid for Athletes

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter.

RESET ADD TWO COL — SUB SOUTH

The Southern Conference last night voted to recommend to the National Collegiate Athletic Association that its purity code be relaxed on financial aid to athletes.

The conference adopted a resolution which will ask the NCAA to permit athletic scholarships to include room, board, laundry and incidental fees. The present aid to athletes under the code restricts the athlete to tuition and fees.

Last night's action by the conference was in reality a reiteration of the stand the group took last February in Birmingham, Ala., when it met with representatives of the Southeastern and Southwestern Conferences. The conference also heard a recommendation by its coach's association that a commissioner with full police powers be named but took no action on the recommendation.

Instead, the proposal was referred to a committee which will make its recommendations at a November meeting of the group. The coaches association voted unanimously to employ a commissioner, and several of the coaches suggested that Coach Wallace Wade of Duke be named czar.

Col. Geary Eppley of the University of Maryland was elected conference president, succeeding Col. William Couper. Max Farrington of Georg Washington was named vice president as the group concluded its two-day session.

Among other important business the conference transacted yesterday:

1. Voted for the unrestricted exchange of football films between schools;

2. Vote out the GI transfer athlete.

Several schools regarded the exchange of pictures as unethical but the conference voted overwhelmingly to permit such exchanges.

For example, if Maryland and North Carolina play on November 20 and Maryland and George Washington on November 27, it is now perfectly legal for North Carolina to loan George Washington its pictures of the Maryland game. There was no rule against this in the past, but it was regarded as unethical in some quarters.

The GI transfer rule applies to students who have participated in sports at institution A and are called into the armed services. If they transfer to Institution B upon their discharge, they cannot participate in such sports as they played at Institution A.

This would, for example eliminate transient players such as Fullback Hosea Rodgers of North Carolina, who played at Alabama before becoming a Tar Heel; Jimmy LaRue, who played at Duke before coming to Maryland, and many others.

If while the student is in the armed forces he is assigned to a college and participates in intercollegiate athletics, such participation will count against his allowed years of participation.

Just before adjourning for dinner, the conference discussed, behind closed doors, a recommendation by VPI to the NCAA that the purity code be changed to allow scholarships to include room, board and laundry. Under the present code, only tuition, books and fees are permitted in scholarship awards.

In another discussion the conference refused to dip into the profits brought home by conference football teams that go bowling on January 1.

It had been proposed that the conference put a "high percentage levy" on its bowl teams. This would have been no small item since 4 of the 16 conference members decided to turn the idea over to a commitee for further study.

Wallace Wade said the conference could adopt the proposal if it wished:

1. To discourage conference teams from going to bowls;

2. To pay for the conference commissioner when and if the Southern get around to hiring one, and

3. To stimulate competition in minor sports which have trouble paying their own way.

Rex Enright, athletic director and head coach at South Carolnia, was elected president of the Conference Football Coaches Association. Art Lewis of Washington and Lee was named vice president, and Quinn Decker of The Citadel was named secretary.

SEC Eases Bowl Rule Conditionally

Gainesville, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP).—The Southeastern Conference changed its football bowl rules today but it was far from opening the floodgates.

Regulations adopted today limit bowl participation to teams with better than a .750 record against conference opponents.

And—no team may go to a bowl oftener than once in three years.

Meeting with the apparent intent of liberalizing regulations that resulted in only champion Georgia playing January 1, conference officials took an alternative that may cut down even more.

Rules which were in effect this fall, when bowls picked their teams, said such teams could play only in the Sugar, Orange and Cotton Bowls. The Miami Orange Bowl took Georgia but the other two bypassed conference teams.

Under the newly passed regulations, only top teams can play in the bowls the first year. If those same teams are on top the next two years and none other play better than .750, no such team would be eligible to go to a bowl those years.

For All-Navy Crown

25,000 See Quantico Face San Diego Eleven Today

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Norfolk, Va., Dec 10.—Undefeated Quantico Marines defend their All-Navy football championship before an anticipated 25,000 here tomorrow at Foreman Field against another unbeaten Marine club, San Diego Recruit Depot.

Although the Marines took the situation in their own hands by winning the East and West Coast titles, the Navy still may have a decisive voice in the outcome.

Permitted by the rules for All-Navy competition to add players for the big game, San Diego selected 17 men from the Naval Training Center there. It would seem to be a lot of bolstering for a team that turned in nine victories in nine starts.

Maj. Hal Harwood, Quantico coach, feels that he can afford to stand pat on a squad that's seeking its twenty-fourth straight triumph over a two-year stretch. This year, Quantico swarmed over most of its 11 opponents. Closest games were the 21-27 opener over Fort Belvoir; 7-0 over Wayne; 26-15 over Xavier U. of Cincinnati and 12-0 over Bainbridge's Naval Academy Prep.

Quantico's leading individual stars include two former Naval Academy gridders, Joe Bartos and Dick Ambrogi. Burly 205-pound Bartos, already tagged by the Washington Redskins, leads in scoring with 78 points. He's averaged 9.5 yards in 63 tries from scrimmage and tops his teammates in pass receiving with 17 catches for an average of 22.2 yards.

Ambrogi, second to Bartos in scoring, tallied two touchdowns on runs of 34 and 12 yards in Quantico's 18-0 victory over Little Creek (Va.) Amphibs in the East Coast championship game.

The game launches the sports world's contribution to the Polio Drive and Bill Stern will broadcast the play-by-play over a coast-to-coast hookup.

Win, lose or draw, Quantico has an important football date at College Park, December 18. Washington's Junior Board of Commerce is sponsoring a game between the Marines and the undefeated Eighty-second Airborne Division team from Fort Benning.

Ez Spots Joe 30 Pounds, Slashes Him To Ribbons

By Jack Cuddy

New York, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Ezzard Charles clinched a June shot at Joe Louis' world heavyweight title tonight by scoring a technical knockout over big Joe Baksi at 2:33 of the eleventh round before a crowd of 11,194 in Madison Square Garden. Charles weighed 178; Baksi 210.

Referee Ruby Goldstein, a former lightweight contender, stopped the bout because Baksi was bleeding profusely from gashes above and beneath his left eye.

Baksi, a former coal miner from Kulpmont, Pa., also was bleeding from his mouth, nose and a small gash in his right brow.

Fans Boo Halt

Big, lumbering Baksi had exposed his face too much to the accurate-punching Cincinnati Negro as he marched forward in a low crouch, trying to chop down Ezzard with body blows.

It was an excellent fight, and the crowd gave both battlers an ovation when they left the ring. However, the fans—who had paid $40,833—expressed disapproval of the referee's intervention. They indictated they thought Goldstein should have let Baksi continue a little longer.

The United Press had the fight scored even at the end of the tenth round. Baksi's five rounds included the tenth which had been taken away from Charles for fouling by hitting on the break.

Baksi Scores Heavily

In the fifth, sixth and seventh rounds, it seemed that Baksi's ponderous hooks to the body might succeed in stopping the 26-year-old Negro. But Charles came back in the eighth, after staggering Joe by hitting him with a right uppercut as they were breaking from a clinch.

Charles indicated that he might be a dangerous opponent for Champion Joe Louis in June. Louis will be 35 years old in May, and he will have been out of actual competition since last June when he knocked out Jersey Joe Walcott.

Ezzard is an explosive puncher with the left hook, and he can throw "repeaters"—a series of left hooks that may number from two to six. Bakhi found those repeaters very disturbing tonight. There were no knockdowns; but Baksi was staggered in the second, third and eighth rounds. And Baksi takes a punch much better than Louis.

It was the first time in Baksi's career of 63 professional fights that he failed to go the distance. And he had been on the floor only once in his career—in a bout with Al Hart four years ago.

Louis, who was fighting an exhibition tonight with Billy Conn at Chicago, had stated recently that he would fight tonight's winner in June if the winner were impressive. Charles surely appeared impressive enough to threaten Louis' crown.

Louis Beats Conn Again

Chicago, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis deadpanned through six exhibition rounds against Billy Conn tonight to win an easy "newspaper" decision over the man he twice knocked out in championship contests.

It seemed at the finish that Louis hardly worked up a sweat before the 6517 fans who paid a net of $23,054 to see the scrap. It was a far smaller crowd than the promoters expected, but was large enough to pay Louis $7492.55 for his work.

The Pittsburgh kid, who weighed 186 for tonight's combat with 14-ounce gloves, made a showing in the first round while the champion was still figuring whether Conn was going to zig or zag.

After that it was Louis all the way. Six writers in a ringside poll gave him the decision, one called it a draw, and one believed that Conn warranted a victory.

Skater Fined $100 in Row

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Arthur Lessard of the Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League was fined $100 and suspended for two weeks today by League President Maurice Podoloff.

The action followed an altercation between Lessard and Referee Walt Russell during a game with Cleevland at Buffalo last Wednesday, won by Cleveland, 4-2.

Navy, Rice Open Series in 1951

For the first time, the eyes of Texas actually will be on the Navy football team according to an announcement yesterday that Navy has signed a two-year home-and-home agreement with Rice Institute.

The Middies will entertain Rice at Baltimore September 29, 1951, and won't go to Houston until October 11, 1952.

Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) said here yesterday he was quite happy over the arrangement. Said the Congressman, "Navy never has set foot on Texas soil and I'm sure the folks down in Houston will give it a warm reception."

Lions Hold Providence To 3-3 Tie

The Washington Lions struggled uphill for two periods until their beefy defenseman, Harry Dick, drove in his second goal of the evening and brought the Lions a 3-3 tie with the Providence Reds, Eastern Division leaders in the American Hockey League.

Dick's shot, a tricky stroke which caromed off several skates until it slid unmolested into the nets, came at 13:58 of the third period, breaking a scoreless stretch of 37 minutes.

Carl Lipscombe started the Reds off with a goal at 2:34 of the first period. Six minutes later Pete Kapusta pushed a change of pace toward the goal which Crowdis misjudged and dived at in vain.

The Lions circled the goal and lifted one over Harvey Bennett's shoulder at 13:38. Harry Dick tied it spectacularly a few minutes later, taking a baseball swing at the puck from out near the blue line which shot the disc off Bennett's hip into the net. Jackie Hamilton blazed one under Crowdis' right foot in the next minute to end the period's scoring and the Reds entered the second period, leading 3-2.

35 Below Zero Isn't Too Cold For Alaska's Ice Bowl Game

Fairbanks, Alaska, Dec. 10 (AP).—And now we have another New Year's Day bowl game with a strange set of rules. It's the Fairbanks Ice Bowl.

The University of Alaska and Ladd Field football elevens will meet in the first such contest of its kind in the Alaska territory.

Regulation costume for the frigid fracas will be fur parkas over shoulder pads. Mukluks or shoepacs will be the footgear. Mittens will be permitted and, under the rules, may be removed for passing.

The kickoff time is scheduled for 11 a. m.—because the sun rises at 9:55 a. m. and sets at 1:54 p. m.

But all bets are off if it gets too cold. The game will be called if the temperature drops under 35 below.

Mickey Vernon in Top Demand With Hunt on for 1st Baseman

By Jack Hand

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 10 (AP).—Mickey Vernon of the Washington Senators in particular and first basemen in general was in high demand today as baseball men closed the minor league convention and headed to Chicago for next week's major league meetings.

Despite a poor batting average of .242 in 1948, Vernon is well up on the list of desirable first basemen. He would fit nicely into the plans of the New York Yankees and there was a strong suspicion among baseball men that Vernon will be in a Yankee uniform next season.

(In Washington, Owner Clark Griffith reiterated "there is nothing new on Vernon." Vernon has been reported on the blocks for some time. Griffith has said that he is working on some deals.)

Cleveland, however, would be willing to give the Yanks Eddie Robinson who drove in 83 runs with a .256 average, if George Weiss would loosen up with Joe Page. If the Indians trade Robinson, Rookie Al Rosen, who came up as a third baseman, would be the likely first sacker for the Tribe. He worked out there last fall.

The Chicago White Sox, who disposed of Tony Lupien to the Pacific Coast League, expect to pick up a first base replacement from the Yanks. Oddly enough, the New York club has five first sackers on its reserve list but none quite fit the bill. Steve Souchock may be ticketed for the Sox who have only Rookie Gordon Goldsberry, from Memphis.

When Steve O'Neill left Detroit he listed first and second base as the two weak spots that had to be plugged. Red Rolfe, the new manager, may be willing to go along with First Baseman George Vico who had a .269 rookie season, but second is a "must" despite denials; reports persist that the Tigers offered Dizzy Trout or Virgil Trucks to Cleveland for Berardino but were turned down. Berardino still may wind up with Detroit as he is an extra wheel at Cleveland.

National League clubs are no better off in first basemen. The St. Louis Cards could use a dependable man although Manager Eddie Dyer still has hopes for Nippy Jones, a converted second baseman. The tip here is that the Cards may land a centerfielder, their weakest point. If they pick up a centerfielder and if Ed Sauer, a draftee, can play right field, it might be back to first base for Stan Musial.

3 Alabama Gridders Jailed On National Guard Charge

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 10 (AP).—The ranking National Guard officer in Alabama said today that if members of the Alabama football team do not attend guard drills they will be discharged and turned over to their draft boards.

Brig. Gen. Walter Hanna, commanding general of Alabama units of the Thirty-first "Dixie" Division, made the statement in commenting on the arrest of five university Alabama students, including three members of the varsity football team.

The five spent Wednesday night in the county jail at Tuscaloosa after being arrested on warrants charging failure to report for Federal inspection of a National Guard unit. They were released yesterday after signing their own bonds.

"Members of the Alabama football team asked to be admitted to the National Guard," General Hanna said in an interview.

"They have made a terrible mistake in thinking they would not be required to submit to military duty . . .

"Unit commanders have been very kind in permitting members of the Alabama football team to drill on Sunday during the football season. Some even were excused from summer encampment because of spring football practice.

"When the football season ended, these boys still failed to show up for their two-hour drills.

"If they feel they cannot live up to their obligations, we will discharge them and turn them over to their draft boards for action."

The five arrested Wednesday night are Eddie Salem, Rebel Steiner and Larry Lauer, members of the varsity football team, and William Bryant and David Schnitzer. Steiner played with the Alabama basketball team in its game with Birmingham-Southern Wednesday night.

They were taken into custody on warrants sworn to by Capt. Beasor B. Walker, Tuscaloosa, commander of Company A.

Fulks Tells Of Bribe to 'Throw' Game

By Russ Green

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—A self-styled wholesale automobile salesman was held in $1500 bail for the grand jury today on charges of attempting to bribe Philadelphia Warriors' star Joe Fulks into "throwing" basketball games.

Fleishman

Fulks testified at a magistrate's hearing that Morris (Moxie) Fleishman, 33, described by police as a "small fry" gambler, met him outside his home last November 24 and suggested a "way of making easy money" by "offsetting scores."

"Others are doing it in other sports," Fulks quoted Fleishman. "You can't play basketball forever; why not make yours now?"

Assistant Police Superintendent George Richardson told Magistrate Fred Schwarz that the case is "positive evidence of racketeers getting into our sports—petty gamblers and big gamblers."

Takes in Other States

Richardson, head of the Detective Bureau, said Fleishman apparently was the front for gambling interests who may operate behind the scenes in Pennsylvania or any of the other eight States comprising the Basketball Association of America.

Fulks, who set a league scoring record of 1611 points in 1946, said Fleishman contacted him last summer and wanted to sell him a new automobile.

In succeeding weeks, Fleishman made periodic telephone calls to his home, the 6-foot 5-inch Fulks said.

Fulks, second highest scorer in the BAA this year with an average of 21.9 points per game, said the alleged bribery offer was made outside his home the day before Thanksgiving.

The Warriors' star had just returned from a grocery shopping trip. Fleishman, he said, talked about automobiles, then steered the conversation to sports.

"He told me that there was a way of making easy money and that others were doing it in other sports, by offsetting scores," Fulks said.

Uses Handkerchief as Mask

The Arena Corp., which presents games here, said Fulks' reply was: "Man, you're crazy; get the hell out of here." Then he reported the incident to Warriors' Manager-Coach Eddie Gottlieb. Police and the BAA headquarters in New York also were notified.

Fulks said no specific games or amounts of money were mentioned in the bribe attempt.

Fleishman was picked up in a South Philadelphia poolroom last night. He entered the Magistrate's Court masking his face with a handkerchief and did not remove it until advised to do so by his counsel, Bernard Lemisch.

Police said Fleishman, alias Norris Singer, had been arrested twice previously in the last four years on disorderly conduct charges involving gambling at basketball games here. On each occasion, he was discharged by former Chief Magistrate John J. O'Malley.

O'Malley recently was tried on State charges of malfeasance in office involving mishandling of gambling cases, but the trial ended in a hung jury. He will be brought to trial again early next year.

Locals Can Get Even In Contest Here Tonight

Chicago, Dec. 10 (Spl.).—Washington's sensational Caps sustained their second defeat of the season tonight, but the St. Louis Bombers had to catch fire in an overtime struggle in order to win, 88-83.

The defeat was only the second suffered by Washington in the Basketball Association of America race in 18 games, and the Caps will have an opportunity to get even with St. Louis in a return meeting in Washington tomorrow night.

Playing in the first game of a doubleheader before 6000 spectators in the Chicago Stadium, the Caps appeared to be beaten in regulation time but Matt Zunic gave them a brief reprieve.

With less than a minute left to play, Zunic made two free throws, then took a desperation shot from the center of the floor and the ball went into the basket. This tied the score at 74-all and sent the teams into a five-minute overtime struggle.

But Zunic's efforts proved futile for the Bombers, last season's western division champions, scored 12 points in the first three minutes of the overtime period and drew away to an 85-78 lead.

Ace Maughan held the hot hand during this spurt and scored seven points in the overtime. Belus Smawley picked up five points and Johnny Logan two while the Caps were limited to baskets by Bones McKinney, Sonny Hertberg, Leo Katkaveck and Johnny Norlander and a free throw by Norlander.

The Caps playing without Fred Scolari, who is nursing a leg injury, jumped to a 4-0 advantage on baskets by Dick Schultz and Bob Feerick, and held a 19-16 lead entering the second quarter.

However, the Bombers acquired a 23-19 lead and at one junction late in the second period were ahead 36-26. Then Cleggie Hermsen put on a one-man exhibition for six straight points to shrink the halftime deficit to 36-32.

The next Washington hero was Katgaveck, who contributed two successive field goals late in the third quarter to retrieve the lead for Washington at 48-45.

The lead changed hands six times in the fourth period before the Bombers raced to a 4-point advantage at 74-70, with only seconds remaniing. This merely set the stage for Zunic's heroics.

Hertzberg headed Washington with 21 points, while Smawley with 24 and Maughan with 23, were high foor St. Louis.

Caps Meet Bombers At Home Tonight

The Caps will have a chance to get even with St. Louis in less than 24 hours. Both teams hurry here from Chicago for a game at Uline Arena tonight.

When last seen locally, the Caps were unbeaten and boasted a 15-game winning streak. They won only one in their three-game road trip, beating George Mikan and his Minneapolis Lakers, 94-83. It was last-place Indianapolis who snapped their victory skein, 94-78.

Anacostia was no match for Patterson Park yesterday and the Indians were walloped by Baltimore's Interhigh champion, 73-38, at the Anacostia gymnasium.

Patterson Park was led by its All-State junior Mel Baldwin, who scored 12 points, though he played for less than half the game. The victory was Patterson Park's second straight this season, and its twentieth straight over two seasons.

Dick Kimmerling turned in the best all-around performance for Anacostia as he tossed in six points. The loss was the second in a row for winless Anacostia.

Gremlin, Beau Wynn Second, 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10.—Ariel Gift, in the money 10 times this year but unable to win, finally reached the winner's circle on his sixteenth try.

Carrying the colors of Virginia McKenney and answering the urging of Jockey Ray Arduini—both Washingtonians — the 6-year-old came with a bold stretch rush that spelled a half-length victory in the Shenandoah Purse, featuring the Friday program.

The son of Ariel lead Mrs. J. Machise's Gremlin into the wire with third money in the field of six going to N. S. Cava's Beau Wynn, the favorite.

Jockey Charlie Richmond was the riding hero with four winners. He rode both ends of the $93 daily double.

His List

He took the opener with G. C. Smith's Abrazo at a healthy $46 and came back in the second with Mrs. H. M. Simpson's By Accident at $5.40. Richmond's third winner was Mercer Love 3d's Gertie O., paying $12. In the day's finale, he booted Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Honey Bun to the wire to bring Trainer H. M. Simpson of Washington his second winner of the day. Honey Bun paid $38.60.

Ariel Gift was clocked in 1:53 1-5 for 1 1-16 miles over a track that was labeled "good" and in the best condition of the meeting to date. The winner, second to H. G. Bedwell's Leamour in his previous outing, paid a $13.40 mutuel.

Winner Best Horse

The winner was the best horse under the weights and the conditions. He was squeezed back approaching the stretch when caught in close quarters but still had enough zip to come to the outside and stage his aforementioned game drive.

Larkaround, Beau Wynn and Gremlin all got to the front at different stages. The first two tired and Gremlin, despite the efforts of Jockey Jimmy Baird, couldn't resist the big push of Ariel Gift.

A six-race winning streak of Wayne Kendrick's Free Valley was broken in the sixth race. The Washington-owned gelding fell a victim to a closing rush of J. N. Barnes' remarkable Miss Prime. Third behind these two sprint aces was J. J. Nash's Slower.

Miss Prime made it 14 victories in 22 tries this year while under excellent handling by Jockey Stanley Austin. Free Valley, away from the races for months, went to the front as expected but Miss Prime, despite her 123-pound assignment, wore down the gelding in smart fashion to be a going-away winner.

Miss Prime paid $5.20 and was clocked in .50 4/5, the best time of the session for the short four and a half furlongs.

Red Gaddis Fights Wirks

Monday night's program of eight-rounders at Turner's Arena is all packaged and ready for delivery, it was announced yesterday from the executive offices of Gabe Menendez, who did the packaging.

A rematch between two local featherweights, Burt Wicks and Red Gaddis, was joined to three other matches yesterday to complete the card. At the same time, Tony Longo, disabled with a swollen lip, was replaced with New York's Tim Healy, as Jimmy Cooper's opponent.

Herbie (Biff) Jones, the Southeast lefty, will make his seasonal debut at the arena against another New Yorker, Freddie Smith, of Ray Robinson's stable. The other bout will find Holly Mims trying to recoup a loss he suffered to Garland Edwards in a preliminary to the Joe Louis-Pat Comiskey exhibition.

Both Jones and Cooper are in line for the finer things in boxing if they can continue to please local fans. Cooper is scheduled to headline several arena programs through the winter and Jones has been tempted by talk of a bout with Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler.

Baltimore Gets '49 Baseball Meet

Minneapolis, Dec. 10 (AP).—The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues ended its sessions today by choosing Baltimore for next year's meeting site and increasing President George M. Trautman's salary $5000.

Trautman's salary, effective January 1, 1949, will be $30,000 annually. His five-year contract has three more years to run.

3-Car Crash Ends Chase At 95 Mph; 1 Dies, 1 Hurt

Arlington Man Unconscious For 18 Hours; Auto Reported Stolen

One man was killed and another injured early yesterday near Gainesville, Va., in a three-car collision that ended a 95-mile-an-hour police chase on Route No. 211.

Killed instantly about 12:30 a. m. in a head-on crash was a man identified by Virginia State Police as Ernest J. Felli, 44, of Gainesville, who was driving a jeep along the highway.

Police identified the injured man as John Tyson, 24, of 5200 N. 19th rd., Arlington, driver of the car being chased for speeding.

Police said they learned later that the car Tyson was driving had been reported last Sunday by R. E. Johnson of 4512 N. 17tn st., Arlington, as stolen.

Tyson was placed under police guard at Arlington Hospital, where he was admitted with a possible skull fracture, a broken jaw and face cuts. He remained unconscious 18 hours after the accident.

Trooper P. P. Herndon said he had chased Tyson's car east from Gainesville at speeds ranging up to 95 miles an hour.

The collision occurred five miles east of Gainesville, he said, when Tyson tried to pass another car and ran head-on into Felli's jeep coming from the opposite direction.

The third car also became involved, but the damage to it was slight, Herndon said, and no one in it was injured.

Herndon said Tyson was pinned under the steering wheel of the car.

State and Prince William County police last night were searching for three men reported also in Tyson's car.

Mercury Drop To 18 Is Seen For Suburbs

A low of 18 degrees in the suburbs and 27 in the District—rock-bottom so far this season—was forecast for early today by the Weather Bureau.

Faint traces of snow were detected by the weatherman yesterday.

Previous low for the current cold spell was 30 degrees on December 1.

Forecast for today and Sunday was mostly sunny and cold, but with increasing cloudiness probably ending in rain Sunday afternoon.

In view of subfreezing temperatures expected around sunrise today, some sort of antifreeze was highly recommended—for automobile radiators, at least.

The lowest recorded yesterday morning was 32 degrees at 6:40 a. m., with the high at 43 degrees at 1:58 p. m.

In many sections of Maryland, the hours of darkness yesterday brought the coldest weather of the season.

Readings included 20 at Cumberland, 24 at Waldorf, 25 at Benson, 27 at Pikesville and 31 at Salisbury.

Garrett and Allegany Counties expect snow this afternoon and tonight, while the rest of the State braced for fair and continued cold

Baby Rescued From Blazing Bedroom

A 3-year-old boy, overcome with smoke and seriously burned, was rescued from his flaming bedroom late yesterday by Lieut. J. H. Barnett of Truck Company No. 4.

The child, Jackson Larry Parks, 1642 4th st. nw., was rushed to Freedmen's Hospital, where attendants said he was in critical condition from first, second and third degree burns of his legs, hands and face.

Lieutenant Barnett said a woman outside the two-story brick house screamed that a baby was inside when firemen arrived. He ran upstairs and found the child unconscious.

Cause of the blaze was undetermined. Firemen said the room and contents were destroyed.

To Honor Mellon

Fountain Plans Given Approval

Plans for a memorial fountain to the late Andrew W. Mellon, who gave the National Gallery of Art to the United States, were approved by the Commission of Fine Arts yesterday.

Plans for several buildings also were approved and an offer of space in the Corcoran Gallery of Art for an exhibit during the Sesquicentennial celebration in 1950 was accepted.

The Mellon memorial fountain, designed by Eggers & Higgins, architects, of New York and Washington, will be located in a triangle at the juncture of Constitution and Pennsylvania aves., just east of Sixth st. nw., H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the commission, said.

The fountain will be of granite and bronze. Over the knife-like edge of a fluted basin 53 feet in diameter will fall a veil of water, through which will be visible slightly above eye level the 12 signs of the zodiac sculptured in high relief, into a second basin. On the broad side of the triangle will be a marble bench with a suitable inscription. The bench will be in a frame of shrubbery and serve as a foil to the fountain.

Caemmerer said the Corcoran's offer of space was accepted subject to the approval of Congress, and would be used for an exhibit of past and present plans of the city in cooperation with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Among the plans that would be shown would be those of L'Enfant, drawn up during George Washington's time, the McMillan commission of 1901 and those of today for future developments.

The Fine Arts Commission approved designs for a four-story District Red Cross building on E st. between 20th and 21st sts. nw., and an administration and laboratory building in the National Arboreteum development along Bladensburg rd. and Maryland ave. in the Hamilton area of Northeast Washington.

Also approved were designs for an engineering building and a women's dormitory, with suggestions for minor changes, at Howard University.

Msgr. Hochwalt Attacks Religious Education Ruling

Attacking a recent Supreme Court decision banning religious education classes in public schools, the Right Rev. Msgr. Frederick G. Hochwalt declared last night that American separation of church and state is a "policy," not a "principle."

Monsignor Hochwalt, head of the National Catholic Welfare Conference's education department, said that the Constitution merely forbids the adoption of a state religion. It does not forbid the States from acting to support or even maintain religious groups, he said, so long as these groups are treated with equality and impartiality.

Delivering the third lecture in the Charles Carroll Forum series at the Mayflower Hotel, Monsignor Hochwalt cited freedom as the basic principal of the Constitution and added that the separation spoken of in the Constitution is "a political policy to help achieve that principle."

'Bottleneck' Near Capitol Still Headache

Planning Group Fails To Find Solution for Vexing Traffic Problem

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday considered the traffic bottleneck along the southern edge of the Capitol grounds and like District highway officials, who also have the problem under consideration, came up without an answer.

The bottleneck occurs between Pennsylvania ave. at 2d st. se. and Independence ave. at 1st st. sw. Traffic from Pennsylvania and Maryland aves. as well as from Independence ave. flows into the 35-foot wide strip which includes streetcar tracks.

Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d, chairman of the commission, said that a tunnel has been considered but discarded as "too costly."

The planners, concluding their monthly two-day meeting, also discussed with members of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission the development of stream parkways in the Greater Washington area.

The commissioners approved the reintroduction into the new Congress of three bills that failed to pass the current Congress. They concern the proposed transfer of the Suitland Parkland and the Baltimore Parkway to the National Park Service, the exchange of property rights of land adjoining the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway south of Alexandria between the Park Service and the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corp., and the exchange of land between agencies of the Federal and District governments.

Beau Brummel, Ex-Dancer Open Divorce Trial Here

One of Washington's best-dressed men was sued for divorce yesterday by his wife who used to kick her heels as a professional dancer.

He is Wallace Bruce MacNamee, 57, former newspaperman and now executive assistant of the National Federation of American Shipping.

She is Mrs. Elizabeth Quigley MacNamee, 53, daughter of Richard L. Quigley, pioneer Washington pharmacist.

In the divorce trial which opened yesterday in District Court before Judge F. Dickinson Letts, she accused him of an excessive fondness for cocktails, said he had struck her on three occasions and once called her "a damned miserable parasite."

According to papers filed in the suit, the MacNamees were married on September 14, 1940, he for the second time, and separated in August, 1947.

He was voted the fifteenth best-dressed man in America in 1941 by the Custom Tailors Guild of New York City. (Peter Arno, the cartoonist, was No. 1).

Mrs. MacNamee, asking a limited divorce on grounds of cruelty, said on the stand yesterday she was a professional dancer from 1928 through 1931, appearing for one year in the Metropolitan Opera ballet. She said she also toured Europe doing ballroom and exhibition dancing and appeared, among other places, at Paris and on the Riviera.

"Isn't it true," asked Hubert G. King, MacNamee's lawyer, "that your husband accused you of not doing your housework and not sewing buttons on his shirts?"

Mrs. MacNamee described her household duties and then said:

"I also took care of his clothes. I was his valet. He was meticulous. I laid out all his clothes for him. He never left the house with a button out of place."

A deposition taken from Mrs. MacNamee's father, who is 81, was read into the record. In his deposition, Quigley said the couple had lived in his home, 3415 34th st. nw., during their marriage. He said one morning he found MacNamee passed out in the kitchen.

Quigley said the couple took to occupying separate bedrooms two years after their marriage. King suggested that perhaps this was because MacNamee complained his wife snored too loud.

"The reverse would be true," the father answered in his deposition.

The trial will be resumed at 10 a. m. Monday.

Aged Janitor Burned to Death In Lighting Fire

A 75-year-old janitor was burned to death yesterday when his clothes caught fire as he was starting a furnace fire in an apartment house at 1253 G st. se.

The man, Daniel Carroll, who lives at 623 E st. se., had cleaned out the furnace and was lighting a new fire about 4:30 p.m. when sparks ignited his clothing. He ran outside, through the yard and into a shed, trying to beat out the flames.

But the flames only set fire to the shed. Carroll dashed back into the yard, calling for help. Neighbors saw him as he ran into a pile of trash. While one called firemen, others ran across the street to a gasoline service station for a fire extinguisher.

Walker H. Ridgely, attendant at the gasoline station, ran over and put out the flames as firemen arrived. The clothing had been burned off Carroll's body. The firemen put out the flames in the shed.

An ambulance from Gallinger Hospital arrived. Dr. Charles Beskin pronounced Carroll dead

2 Slayers Of Druggist Die in Chair

Wheeler and Patton Executed After Vinson Turns Down Final Plea for Stay

Reginald J. Wheeler and Jesse James Patton died with a show of bravado in the electric chair at District Jail yesterday.

Neither flinched as they were called upon to pay for the holdup slaying of Maurice L. Bernstein, Washington druggist, on June 5, 1946.

Their last hope died at 10:13 a. m. when the jail received word that Chief Justice of the United States Fred M. Vinson had denied a final appeal for a stay of execution.

Patton went first. The 23-year-old bandit, slender, wearing blue dungarees and work shirt, his eyes open wide, stepped nimbly into the execution chamber at 10:17 a. m.

He drew on a cigarette, then took four quick steps to the chair and sat down.

Patton puffed again on his cigarette and two ministers began singing, "Precious Lord, Take My Hand," a Negro spiritual, as guards adjusted the straps.

A converted football helmet was placed on Patton's shaved head. A leather mask was placed over his face. Then Capt. Charles E. Tucker, senior guard at the jail, signaled the executioner.

Patton's slender figure strained against the confining straps as the jolt hit him.

For two minutes there was a low hum. Then the electricity was turned off.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, and Dr. Martin L. Cannon, chief medical officer at the jail, listened for a heartbeat and finally pronounced Patton dead at 10:27 a. m.

Wheeler, 28, the triggerman, entered the chamber at 10:30 a. m.

He was husky. His face was composed but he was puffing furiously on a cigar. Before he stepped to the chair, he extended his hand to several of the guards and to the ministers. They shook hands.

Then he seated himself with nonchalance. He waved his hand to the ministers as the straps were tightened. He kept the cigar clenched between his teeth.

The ministers were again singing the same spiritual they had sung for Patton.

Wheeler insisted on one last draw on the cigar before the mask was put over his face. As he exhaled the smoke, it spiraled eerily up from beneath the mask.

The signal was given and Wheeler's great bulk tore forward at the straps as the voltage hit him. He was pronounced dead at 10:38 a. m.

Jail officials said Patton and Wheeler bade each other goodby before they died. As Patton was led from a cell to the threshold of the execution chamber, he extended his hand through the bars of the cell in which Wheeler awaited his turn.

"Keep your chin up," said Wheeler.

The execution of Wheeler and Patton left eight condemned men still in the jail, six murderers and two rapists.

A girl reporter represented the Afro-American at yesterday's execution. It was, jail officials said, the first time a woman had ever witnessed an electrocution in the District.

7 Candidates File Petitions For Council

All Have Backing Of Montgomery Charter Committee

Petitions of candidacy for seven Montgomery County council candidates, indorsed by the Montgomery Charter Committee, were filed yesterday with the County Board of Election Supervisors.

Charter committee candidates for whom the petitions were filed were: P. G. Ligon, Brinklow; Augustus R. Selby, Germantown; Thomas C. Kelley, Darnestown; J. Douglas Bradshaw, Takoma Park; Mrs. Dorothy S. Himstead, Chevy Chase; Lewis Merriam, Kensington, and Frederick P. Lee, Bethesda.

Norman B. Ames, charter committee chairman, said each of the seven petitions contained at least 745 signatures.

Ames and Plummer Shearin, charter committee executive secretary, filed the petitions, the signatures on which were obtained, according to Ames, by approximately 60 committee members in two days. Only 500 signatures were required on each.

The seven candidates were the first to qualify for county council election, now scheduled for January 6.

Other candidates who have announced, but who have not yet filed, are Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park; Charles K. Davies, jr., Gaithersburg, and Romeo W. Horad, Silver Spring. Deadline for filing is Monday.

Meanwhile, the question of whether the scheduled election should be enjoined was being studied by Chief Judge Charles W. Woodward and Associate Judges Stedman Prescott and Patrick J. Schnauffer of Montgomery County Circuit Court.

The three judges Thursday heard arguments on the injunction request brought by four Republican county commissioners.

Postlude

Juilliard 4 Makes Bow In Library

By Paul Hume

The Juilliard Quartet made its Washington bow last night in the Library of Congress.

Playing Mozart, Bartok, and Beethoven, it brought to mind the feat accomplished this summer at the Tanglewood Festival, where it played the entire cycle of Bartok quartets.

Last night it played his fifth quartet, dating from 1934. It separated Mozart's D Major quartet of the Haydn series from the third of the set by Beethoven dedicated to Count Rasoumowsky.

The quartet plays with fine balance, beautiful tone, and excellent intonation. If its members are fortunate to remain together after finishing their work in New York City (which is not likely) they could become one of our outstanding ensembles. Maturity is the only power by which they can acquire a polish that occasionally deserts them in climactic moments.

The vitality of their playing gives such familiar scores as the C. Major quartet of Beethoven a fresh sound. When this vitality is turned on music of their own time, as in the case of Bela Bartok's music, they display an enviable insight into the structure and message of contemporary writing.

We hope that they may be persuaded to return to the Library soon with the entire set of Bartok quartets to which they are eminently suited.

Gandhi Talk Scheduled

Shiv Shastri, deputy director of information of the Indian Embassy, will speak at the Washington Ethical Society, Sunday at 11:15 a. m. at Friendship House, 619 D st. se. His topic will be "Mohandas Gandhi—a Tribute."

10 Volunteer to Donate Skin To Aid Rector Boy's Recovery

Little Michael Rector, nearly 4 and critically burned, writhed on his hospital dressing table yesterday and pleaded:

"Please put some more skin on me. It feels so much better."

He didn't know that strangers, 10 of them, had already read of his plight in The Washington Post and had offered themselves for free skin grafts to help him over the hump.

He only knew, surgeons said, that the five large swaths of skin his father had sacrificed had eased his pain considerably. The grafts, one behind each knee, another across the chest, and two on his spine, were "holding firm," doctors said.

Michael had run into his home at 613 Elliott st. ne., on November 12, screaming that he was "burning up," his clothing on fire.

Physicians at Casualty Hospital said he suffered searing burns of his body from his ankles to his armpits, over a body area totaling 70 per cent. Such burns to more than 30 per cent of the body are usually fatal, they said.

After grafting five 4 by 8-inch patches of his father's skin to the boy's body, surgeons said they were loath to take any more from him. The father, Everett, 35, an auto mechanic, has remained constantly in the son's hospital room since the accident of nearly a month ago.

Among yesterday's volunteers for painful grafts were four civilian employes of the Air Forces Procurement Office, Fairchild Aircraft, at Hagerstown, Md. Spokesman for the four gave his name as Nicholas D. Vessa, 41, of Smithsburg, Md.

He identified his coworkers and fellow volunteers as Rudolph Schelle, 52; Robert Edwards, 36, and Gordon Silvernail, 38. Their names and Vessa's address were forwarded to the Rector family.

Casualty Hospital officials reported receiving six other offers.

'Production-Line' Future For Hospitals Is Debated

A discussion on whether tomorrow's hospital will be a production line highlighted the final day yesterday of a week's institute on hospital planning conducted by the American Hospital Association at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Robert W. Cutler, New York architect, urged that it will, and the negative side was supported by Sister Mary Antonella, superintendent of Georgetown University Hospital.

Sixty hospital administrators and assistants, consultants, architects, engineers and members of hospital boards of trustees who attended the daily sessions of the institute were awarded certificates by Leo Schmelzer, superintendent of George Washington University Hospital and chairman of the institute advisory committee.

William A. Riley, Boston hospital architect, spoke on the use of basements in future hospitals. Schmelzer talked on "Little Areas That Make the Hospital Work Better." Everett Jones, vice president, The Modern Hospital Purchasing File, Chicago, spoke on "Testing the Community to Support a Hospital and Methods of Raising Funds."

Collectors Who Impersonate Officers Face Wrath of Court

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court served notice yesterday that he is going to crack down on loan collectors posing as law officers to collect debts.

The judge imposed a $500 fine and three years' probation on Samuel M. Miller, 38, identified as assistant manager of a Mt. Rainier (Md.) branch of the Aetna Financing Co. According to court papers, Miller posed as an FBI agent in trying to find a man who owed money to the loan company.

Schweinhaut said that he wanted associations of moneylenders here notified that if anyone else is convicted before him of a similar offense he will go to jail. He also suggested that the loan company pay the fine.

In another case, Ernest C. Rayburn, 34, a restaurateur of 1235 13th st. nw., was given a one-to-five-year prison sentence for shooting at pointblank range—and missing—his former fiancee.

According to police, the girl, Miss Elsie W. Samson, 22, was a typist at 1244 5th st. ne., when after a spat, Rayburn walked in and fired a shot which hit the desk in front of her.

Edward Wallace, jr., 23, 931 P st. nw., was sentenced to serve 20 months to 5 years for looting the home of Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug, from which more than $1000 in goods was lifted.

Leroy R. Gravette, 24, of 2614 I st. nw., convicted of attempting to rape a 50-year-old woman in a rest room in Franklin Park, was given 5 to 15 years in jail.

Grandmother to Care for Boy 'Spirited' Here From Florida

A 2½-year-old boy, who was brought from Miami last week by his father, was placed in temporary custody of his maternal grandmother yesterday pending disposition of a divorce case between his parents.

Prince Georges County Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury handed down the ruling giving Mrs. Hettie Smith, of Miami, temporary custody of Sven Rostad following a 7½-hour hearing at Marlboro.

Most of the hearing centered on testimony by the boy's father, Thor Rostad, 36, of 4310 Emerson st., Hyattsville, and his wife, Pearl, 31, also of Miami, principals in a divorce action filed in the county court several weeks ago.

The little boy had been with his mother at the home of Mrs. Smith since September 1 when she left her husband following an argument at a home they formerly shared in Cheverly, Md. Last week, however, Rostad went to Miami and spirited the child away after he had been informed Miami deputies were unable to locate the mother for service of divorce papers.

Since Rostad returned to Washington last Monday the boy has been in custody of Prince Georges County Welfare Board. The child was turned over to the board by Rostad under a court order obtained by the father on the advice of an attorney.

Rostad was on the witness stand for three and a half hours, devoting most of his testimony to an attempt to prove that his wife was unfit to keep the child.

Mrs. Rostad denied threats of bodily harm to the child and gave a contrasting version of her separation from her husband.

In awarding custody to the grandmother, Judge Marbury said it was obvious that neither parent should be awarded the child, but he felt the Welfare Board was not the proper answer. He placed Mrs. Smith under $1000 bond to produce the child in court whenever the divorce hearing is scheduled. Final custody will be determined only after the divorce proceedings are settled.

9 Hospitals Indorse Plan For Indigent Follow-Ups

Ruhland Explains Program Aimed at Cheaper Care for Discharged Cases

Nine Washington hospitals yesterday indorsed the District health officer's plan to save future hospitalization costs by providing follow-up treatment to hospital-discharged indigents.

They urged that the plan be begun as soon as possible, but emphasized its limitations under present budget restrictions.

The program for relieving the load of "repeat patients" at Gallinger Hospital by follow-up home treatments by District contract physicians and clinic care of the ambulatory was proposed by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer. A similar arrangement, he said, has proved successful at Syracuse, N. Y.

Conference Gets Explanation

It was explained by Dr. Ruhland at a Health Department conference yesterday in the Municipal Building.

The plan was devised, the health officer said, because of the large number of chronically ill city indigents who must be rehospitalized at Gallinger because they lack post-hospitalization care.

Under Dr. Ruhland's plan, these patients would be instructed to report to their nearest hospital clinic for regular follow-up treatments. The clinics, in turn, would receive the case histories from Gallinger Hospital. Crippled and bedridden would be visited by Health Department physicians.

Might Boost Operating Costs

Chief complaint voiced yesterday was that the plan would increase operating costs of the hospitals. Dr. James G. Capossela, administrator at Emergency Hospital, pointed out that the District pays but $2 a clinic visit while "on diabetes patients alone the cost of insulin given runs $4 to $5 a patient."

Other representatives argued that the plan would not provide for continuity of treatment by the same physicians throughout a patient's illness.

Another point raised was the added costs to hospitals in record keeping and the expenses involved in rounding up those patients who ignored their clinic appointments.

Representatives from the following hospitals attended: Casualty, Children's, Columbia, Garfield, Emergency, Episcopal, Providence, Georgetown and George Washington. Also present were representatives of various offices of the Health Department.

D. C. Unit Asks AMA for More Light on Tax

The District Medical Society has asked the American Medical Association to more fully explain organized medicine's assessment of $25 from each doctor to fight compulsory health insurance.

This was learned yesterday after reports that some local physicians resented the secrecy surrounding the AMA action at its St. Louis convention last week.

Reports that the society had asked AMA to send a representative to explain the plan to local members were later verified by Theodore Wiprud, executive secretary of the local society. Wiprud said the speaker was invited to attend a scheduled business meeting here on December 22.

The AMA through its assessment for its "educational campaign" seeks to raise $3,500,000 from the organization's 140,000 members. With approximately 1350 members in the District society, the local share would approximate $33,650.

Area News in Brief

Rock Creek Bridge Named for Glover

The Massachusetts ave. bridge across Rock Creek yesterday was designated as the Charles C. Glover Bridge in honor of his efforts in establishment of a park system here.

The designation was made by the District Commissioners.

Glover, who died in 1936, was for 25 years president of the Riggs National Bank. He was a leading figure in establishing Rock Creek and Potomac Parks.

Glover

The bridge named for him was completed in 1941 at a cost of $507,000.

Among his civic deeds was his gift of land for establishment of Glover Park, Children's Playground and for a playground which is now part of Fort Dupont Park.

Glover also was president of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, an officer of American University and Children's Hospital, and one of the original incorporaters of the American Red Cross.

Shoplifter Jailed

Mrs. Katherine Coz, 50, yesterday was convicted for what police said was the tenth time since 1919 for shoplifting.

In Municipal Court she was sentenced to serve a year in jail on a charge of shoplifting six pairs of hose from Kann's Department Store on November 5.

Held for Grand Jury

Issac Vaughn, 30-year-old laborer of 609 S. Royal st., Alexandria, was held for the grand jury in Alexandria Police Court yesterday after waiving preliminary hearing on charges of housebreaking and stealing about $150 worth of truck tires.

Police arrested Vaughn Thanksgiving Day and charged him with stealing the tires from the Landsay-Nicholson warehouse, 100 block of S. Union st. Vaughn was one of ten men arrested about the same time and charged with stealing or buying stolen tires and other accessories. Seven of the men have been fined and two held for the grand jury.

Bootlegger Fined $50

David Douglas Davenport, 32, the erstwhile Union Station bootlegger, came up from the District Jail yesterday to celebrate his 124th appearance in Municipal Court in about a year.

His score for the day was a $50 fine in two convictions for disorderly conduct by cursing in the station and one acquittal on another charge.

Currently, he is serving a year in jail for bootlegging.

U.S. Employe Held in Bond

James B. Fitzgerald, 35, a Federal employe of 4503 Wash st., Chevy Chase, was held under under $1000 bond in Rockville Jail yesterday on assault charges, which police said, grew out of a reported attemp to molest a 13-year-old boy.

Detectives said Fitzgerald was arrested on complaint by the boy's mother that her son said Fitzgerald made improper suggestions to him in the men's room of a Bethesda restaurant.

Police said Fitzgerald denied the charge and claimed he merely asked the boy if he played football.

Third Youth Sentenced

The third youth in a Rockville trio convicted of tire thefts yesterday was ordered not to drink or gamble and to stay off streets after 11:30 p. m.

On those conditions, Judge Charles W. Woodward of Montgomery County Circuit Court gave Thomas S. Carter, 21, a two-year suspended sentence.

A suspended sentence on similar conditions was meted out Thursday to Charles E. Mossburg, 20, and his brother, Wilbur, 18, convicted of the same theft of tires from Rockville Motor Co. last September.

Many Canoes Rented

More than 100,000 persons rented canoes and small craft this year in the Georgetown Channel area of the Potomac River, according to Lieut. Otha Sanders, commander of the Harbor Precinct of the Metropolitan Police Department.

In addition some 421,349 sightseers took river excursions from points within the Washington Channel, he said. The figures represented known sources of recreational facilities and did not include private participation.

Family Evicted From Home . . .

The Washington Post

A COLD OUTLOOK—The Underwood family—George and Katherine and their nine children—were evicted yesterday from their home at 3819 Minnesota ave. ne., which will be torn down to make way for an automobile showroom and gasoline service station. The children are (from left) Warren, 7; Clara, 9; Evelyn, 3; Thomas, 5; James, 4; George, 10, and Joyce, 8. Ruth, 12, was in school, and the youngest, Robert, 2, was brought in out of the cold weather by a relative who lives nearby. The eviction was twice postponed, but the Underwoods have been unable to find another home. The Salvation Army will receive them at its emergency home, 1608 New Hampshire ave. nw., but they can remain there only a few days, it was said

Christianson, Minn. Political Figure, Dies

Theodore Christianson, 65, three-time Governor of Minnesota and former member of Congress from that State, died of a heart attack yesterday at his home in Dawson, Minn.

Mr. Christianson

A staunch Republican who devoted himself to curbing the mounting cost of State government and reducing State indebtedness, Mr. Christianson was Governor from 1924 to 1930. He sponsored legislation which forced the generation which issued bonds to redeem them with their taxes. He restricted the granting of new bank charters, and forced banks to increase their surplus out of earnings to 50 and even 100 per cent of capital stock.

One of his notable acts was the creation of a crime commission to put a permanent end to the crime wave then prevalent. He maintained a firm attitude toward criminals. No pardons were granted during his first term as Governor and only four sentences were reduced.

Born in Lac Qui Parle, Minn., in 1883, Mr. Christianson graduated from the State University law school in 1909 and established a practice in Dawson, 9 miles from where he was born. For 16 years he owned and edited the Dawson Sentinel, and served in the State Legislature from 1914 until his first team as Governor.

In Washington in the Seventy-third Congress, Mr. Christianson was a member of the Military Affairs Committee. The Washington Post of June 5, 1934, described him as "not a jumping-jack politician," but a man who voted "with stolid, silent conviction that the GOP elephant was not dead but only playing possum."

He is survived by his wife, and two sons, Robert of Minneapolis and Theodore, jr., of St. Paul.

Funeral Set Today for R. N. Davidson

Funeral services for Robert N. Davidson, 71, a civilian engineer for the Army Signal Corps for 29 years, will be held at 10:30 a. m. today in the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, 2001 N. Quincy st., Arlington.

Mr. Davidson, who retired from his work last year, died Thursday at his home, 4050 N. 22nd st., Arlington, of a heart ailment after several weeks of illness.

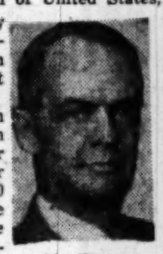
Born in Corrine, Utah, he received his early education in Miles City, Mont., and got his degree in civil engineering from Purdue University in 1904.

Following his graduation, Mr. Davidson worked for a year in the Canal Zone during construction of the Panama Canal. It was in 1918 that he came to Washington to begin work for the Signal Corps.

In his Arlington community, he was an active member of the Church of the Epiphany, serving for 23 years as a vestryman. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ada H. Davidson, and two sons, Edward H. Davidson of Athens, Ohio, and Hugh M. Davidson of the Arlington address. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

W. N. Watson, Trade Group Official, Dies

Warren Neal Watson, 59, of Fairfax, Va., for 18 years secretary of the Manufacturing Chemists Association of United States, died Thursday in Doctors Hospital after an illness of eight weeks.



Mr. Watson

Mr. Watson had lived in Washington or Virginia for more than 30 years since he first came here as first lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Service in 1917.

From 1919 to 1930, he was connected with the Chemical Division of the United States Tariff Commission, of which he became chief in 1927.

Before coming to Washington, Mr. Watson was chief chemist for several New England textile plants. He was born in Auburn, Me., April 4, 1889, and was educated at Bates College, where he served for a time as a chemistry instructor, and Harvard University. Mr. Watson was a member of the Chemists' Club of New York City, the Cosmos Club, and the American Trade Association Executives. He was president of the Washington Trade Association Executives in 1933 and 1934.

In addition to his widow, the former Ruth Thomas, Mr. Watson is survived by his mother, Mrs. Fred O. Watson, Auburn, Me.; a brother, Comdr. Richmond L. Watson, USNR, of Fairfax; a son, Neal Thomas Watson of Cambridge, Mass., and a daughter, Mrs. Kenneth D. Duggan of Fresno, Calif.

Funeral services will be held Monday at noon in the Truro Episcopal Church, Fairfax. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will be Maj. Gens. Alan W. Jones, John E. Dahlquist; Brig. Gens. R. H. Dunlop, John H. Rice; Cols. Emil Leard, C. A. Pritchett, Raymond J. Williamson, Frank Patridge and Allen F. Haynes. Army friends are invited to the services and interment following, in Arlington Cemetery.

Edmund S. Doty

Edmund S. Doty, 60, liaison officer for the Office of International Trade, Department of Commerce, died yesterday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Adam Wyant, 2311 Connecticut ave. nw., after a three-week illness.

Mr. Doty was born in Greensburg, Pa., the son of the late Judge Lucien W. Doty. He served during World War I as an Infantry officer and following the war came to Washington. Later he worked for the Board of Economic Warfare and the Foreign Economic Administration.

He also is survived by another sister, Mrs. H. D. Miller of San Franscisco, a niece, Mrs. Philip Larner Gore, 4501 Dexter st. nw., and two nephews, Lucien D. Miller, Sausalito, Calif., and Adam Wyant of Buffalo, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held in the Fort Myer chapel at 9 a. m. Tuesday and burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. James H. Johnson

Funeral services for Mrs. James Herbert Johnson, 70, widow of the former general manager of Julius Garfinckel & Co., were held Thursday at her home, 3060 16th st. nw.

Mrs. Johnson, who had been ill for about six months, died Wednesday at her home. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers were Lowell Bradford, Thomas Johnson, jr., Richard Harbin, Dr. Neil Campbell, Clifford McCormick, William Bryarly and Ralph Ricketts.

A native Washingtonian, she attended Holy Cross Academy until her marriage at the age of 19.

She leaves a daughter, Miss Elinor Frances Johnson of the 16th st. address, and a sister, Mrs. Blanche Fletcher of Webster st. nw.

Mrs. Emma Le Menager

Mrs. Emma Louise Le Menager, 74, mother of Mrs. W. R. Tascher, 305 Newport ave., Westgate, Md., died yesterday in Chicago at the home of a son she had been visiting.

Born in Ashkum, Ill., she spent the past several years visiting relatives here and in Illinois. She is survived by another son and daughter in Chicago and two grandsons.

Funeral services will be held in Ashkum Sunday.

Philippe Roy

Ottawa Dec. 10 (AP).—Philippe Roy, 80, former Canadian Commissioner General in Paris and later Minister to France, died here today.

Mr. Roy served as Canadian delegate to the Assembly and Council meetings of the League of Nations.

Brilliant Embassy Fete Honors Cuban President

By Marie McNair

PRESIDENT CARLOS PRIO of Cuba, guest of President and Mrs. Truman at Blair House, met his hosts on his own soil last night when the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Belt entertained in honor of their Chief of State.

It was a gay and brilliant reception with decorations worn by the men, and their ladies in new frocks, the last word in high fashion. There was music and champagne; masses of yellow chrysanthemums bordered the grand stairway carpeted in royal red and great bouquets of vari-colored flowers were everywhere.

President and Mrs. Truman with their daughter, Margaret, arriving shortly after 10, were welcomed by hearty applause from the gallery gathered about the stairway. Mrs. Truman wore a gold and black lame gown draped at the side and Margaret's gown was midnight blue faille with a bouffant skirt.

In a small drawing room, President Prio stood with Ambassador Guillerno Belt and Senora de Belt. The senora looked like a little girl in deep green lustrous satin, made with off-shoulder neckline and full sweeping skirt. Also in line to welcome the more than a thousand guests were members of the President's party—Dr. Miguel Suarez Fernandez, president of the Cuban Senate; Dr. Lincoln Dedon, president of the House of Representatives; Carlos Hevia, who's the Cuban Minister of State and Gen. Genovevo Perez Damara, chief of staff of the Cuban Army.

All the Chiefs of Mission of the Diplomatic Corps had been bidden to the fete. The Cabinet, the Supreme Court, members of the Congress were asked, too, and there were a great many of the Ambassador and pretty "Cuca" de Belt's own friends.

In the moving throng Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, was an enchanting figure in gray, the bodice molded to her figure, the skirt a drift of net easily 20 yards around and run through at the hipline with a band of pale pink satin.

Most magnificent jewels were worn by Mrs. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador—a plastron of rubies, emeralds and sapphires adorning her green brocade tunic which was draped with a pale green chiffon scarf.

There were full gowns and slim ones at this fashion show last night; rich satins and delicate laces; some gowns covered up with the new stoles, others showing white shoulders and bare backs.

Welcomed Home

Mrs. Warren Austin, wife of our delegate to the U. N. who was getting a warm welcome home from Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wore deep blue satin with a train, carried an ermine scarf on her arm.

Mrs. Morris Cafritz was in deep red satin brocade, long and slim with an intricate drapery just below her knees at the back. Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador, wore one of the best looking gowns there, of electric blue and mauve chiffon cut high at the front, low in back.

Others there were Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, and Mrs. Snyder in cocoa lace. Attorney General Tom Clark was accompanied by Mrs. Clark who wore a filmy gown of black lace. Mrs. Tom Connally, there with the Senator, was in soft turquoise satin, material she brought back from Italy, and had designed for her in Washington.

The gold satin gown Mrs. George Maurice Morris wore also came from Italy, where she visited this fall. Mme. Abdul Rahim, wife of the Egyptian Ambassador, wore hydrangea blue satin sparkling with silver sequins on the net yoke.

The dean of the diplomatic corps, Norway's Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, was there with Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, and I saw the popular New Zealand Minister and Lady Berendsen, the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon in champagne satin; and the Minister of Saudi Arabia, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih in his black robes and turban wound with gold.

Then—to go on—there were the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Louis Denfeld, the Leslie Biffles, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens, the Charge d'Affaires of Peru, Humberto Fernandez-Davila who expects Senora de Fernandez-Davila to join him the end of the month and Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador.

Jim Farley There

Big, genial Jim Farley held court in his corner, and renewing old friendships was tall and handsome Gonzalo Guell, former Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and now Ambassador to Mexico.

Still others: Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip, Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mrs. Parker West, the Kurt Hetsels, Miss Meta Evans. Mrs. J. J. Back—she's now Mrs. Elmer Pratt—with Mr. Pratt; Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Stackelberg.

And—if you'd have more—Col. William S. Culbertson, wearing his blue sash and decoration from Chile, with Mrs. Culbertson; the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Julius Krug, Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Nietro del Rio, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, the former Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska, Col. Robert Guggenheim and his Mrs., who looked so pretty in billowing white tulle with pale blue ribbons on the skirt; Admiral and Mrs. William O. Spears, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Pendleton Turner, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Col. and Mrs. Consuelo Seoane, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen and Senora de Tarchiani, wife of the Italian Ambassador.

Canadian Parties Honor Admiral Grant

THE Ambassador of Canada and Mrs. Hume Wrong entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of Vice Admiral Harold T. Grant, Canadian chief of naval staff, and Mrs. Grant. In the evening Admiral and Mrs. Grant were honored at a dinner given at the Carlton by Deputy Chief of Naval Operations Vice Admiral Arthur Dewey Struble and Mrs. Struble.

For the coming holidays, the calendar of the Canadian Embassy is crowded with parties. The Ambassador and Mrs. Wrong will give a dinner Tuesday evening and on the following Tuesday, December 21, they will entertain at a punch bowl party for members of the chancery staff. On Christmas night the Ambassador and his wife will host a dinner party for staff officers and their wives.

MRS. Truman (center), yesterday received the first 1949 Columbian Calendar from officers of the Columbian Women—an organization of women alumnae of George Washington University. Club president Miss Ruby Nevins (left), presents the book to the First Lady, who is an honorary member of the organization, while Mrs. William O. Burtner, publicity chairman, stands by. The calendars will be sold to raise money for the alumnae's scholarship fund. Mrs. Truman received the group of officers at Blair House, where the Trumans are living while the White House is being repaired

Sen. Maybank, Mrs. Cecil, Wed In Charleston

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 10 (U.P.). Burnet Rhett Maybank, South Carolina's senior Senator, married the widow of a World War II admiral today in a ceremony that took aristocratic Charleston by surprise.

Maybank, a widower of a year, married Mrs. Charles P. Cecil, a childhood sweetheart and later the friend of his first wife, in a private ceremony.

Mrs. Francis Pelzer, the bride's mother, and Mrs. George D. Paul, Maybank's daughter, were the only witnesses. The Rev. De Wolfe Perry read the simple ceremony at the Pelzer home.

Mrs. Cecil wore traveling clothes and Senator Maybank a business suit. The Maybanks left immediate for a secret honeymoon destination.

So closely had the plans been guarded that Maybank's office staff was amazed to hear of the marriage. There had been no hint of it in this society center where the Senator, a native Charlestonian, is a leading figure.

Maybank has just been elected to a new term. He is acting chairman and senior Democrat of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. He is expected to be chairman in the incoming Congress.

His bride is the widow of Rear Admiral Cecil who died in a Pacific plane crash in 1944. She was Mary Randolph Pelzer and she married Admiral Cecil in 1922.

Farewell Dinner

Lieut. Howard B. Eddy, USN, and Mrs. Eddy who will leave soon for their new station in California, will be guests of honor at a farewell dinner tonight at Normandy Farm to be given by Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Handy, jr.; Dr. and Mrs. Franck C. Winter and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davis.

Robert Lovett Gives Luncheon For Argentine Foreign Minister

THE Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Argentine, Juan Attilio Bramuglia, and Senora de Bramuglia, with their son, Carlos, and daughter, Miriam, are guests at the Argentine Embassy. They arrived by plane Wednesday evening from Rome, Italy, and they will leave town tomorrow at 6 p. m.

Yesterday the minister was guest of honor at a stag luncheon given by Acting Secretary of State, Robert A. Lovett, and today the minister will be honored at a luncheon in the Hall of the Americas by the Organization of the American States.

At Secretary Lovett's luncheon yesterday, which was held at the Carlton, guests included the Ambassador of the Argentine Jeronimo Remorino; the Ambassador of the Argentine to the OAS, Enrique V. Corominas; Argentine Counselors Carlos A. Quiros and Ruben Dussaut; Dr. Carlos A. Bramuglia, son of the Argentine Foreign Minister; Zohar R. del Campo, Minister Bramuglia's interpreter; Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder; Secretary of the Interior, Julius A. Krug; Secretary of Commerce, Charles Sawyer; Senator Tom Connally, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Representative Sol Bloom, Representative Charles A. Eaton, Undersecretary of Agriculture, Albert J. Loveland; Assistant to the President, John R. Steelman; Deputy Administrator of ECA, Howard Bruce; Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, director general of the Organization of American States.

Mrs. Zahm Entertains At Tea Parties

MRS. JOHN ZAHM entertained at two teas this week, one on Wednesday and one on Thursday. On both occasions, over 100 ladies dropped by between 4 and 6 o'clock. The hostess was assisted by her mother, Mrs. C. Melville Shorey, and wives of naval officers.

Capt. John Zahm is a member of the class of '27 at the United States Naval Academy. His ship is due in from the Orient in February, and Mrs. Zahm will be in California to meet him at that time. Mrs. Zahm plans to leave for the West Coast in a few days, going by way of Mexico City, where she will visit with friends.

Mme. Yazici Entertains For Mrs. Bess Pryor

MME. BULENT YAZICI, wife of the Financial Counselor of the Turkish Legation, entertained at a luncheon Thursday in her home, 1700 Webster st. nw., in honor of Mrs. Bess Caudill Pryor. Mrs. Pryor's marriage to Lieut. Col. Clifford Talbert Lee will take place on Thursday, December 23, in the First Baptist Church on 16th st.

Guests at the luncheon included Mrs. William O. Player, jr., Mrs. Jack Osherman, Mrs. Stanley V. Wells and Mrs. A. R. Bengur.

Have You Seen Paul Bunyan?

By Nicha Soure

IF YOU hear thunderous roars piercing the night, don't worry about it. It's only Paul Bunyan snoring in the middle of a bad dream.

Minnesota's legendary protege arrived Monday for a mythical visit to the Nation's Capital astride the largest airplane which could be mustered to carry this gigantic visitor.

Because of his size (he is 24 firs and 1 jack pine tall) and strength (he cracks diamonds in his teeth as though they were peanuts), District citizens are warned to beware lest he accidentally stumble and inadvertently destroy houses by the block.

Mrs. Stanley C. Hedstrom, president of the Minnesota State Society, penned a note to John Russell Young, president of the D. C. Board of Commissioners, telling him of Paul's visit. Commissioner Young took up the problem with the other Commissioners and prominent citizens of Washington, and precautionary measures are already under way.

The Engineer Commissioner is considering reinforcing all the streets with an additional overall 2 feet of concrete to sustain Paul's great weight. Signs will be posted around all the underpasses, of course, to save them from complete destruction should Paul step on them.

The Fire Department has been alerted to divert two of its highest tower trucks to assure adequate drinking facilities for Paul. The two streams of water will be crossed 500 feet in the air to provide a trickling fountain at chest level for him.

Every cloud must have a silver lining, they say, and Washingtonians can be thankful that Paul could not bring "Babe," his blue ox, with him. If he had, Rock Creek Park would have had to be closed and the city Zoo expanded 500 times to contain the Babe.

It's a good thing that Bunyan chap came when he did, too. His imaginary presence can act as an inspiration for the International Tall Tales Contest sponsored by the Minnesota State Society. Anyone over 18 years of age and living in the Greater Washington area can participate in the contest. Only nine thinking days left (counting today and not including the contest deadline, December 20).

You don't need box tops—only a tall tale written in 500 words or less on 8½x11 paper with the name and address of the originator on the back of each sheet. Send as many entries as you want to Paul Bunyan, Box 66, Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington, D. C. The entries, should, of course, mention the Brainerd Lake Area or Minnesota's Paul Bunyan playground.

On January 7 the Minnesota State Society will hold a special party in Paul Bunyan's honor in the Shoreham Hotel. After the party, Paul will leave for home—in the great Northwest.

Lots of feats have been attributed to Paul, but maybe you can think of something different. Bunyan is said to have dug and built Niagara Falls so that he could take a shower bath and he also dug Lake Superior Basin as a permanent watering trough for Babe.

The winter of the blue snow was a great mystery until someone discovered that it was caused when Paul hit his thumb with a 16-pound hammer. He cussed the air blue and the snow also became saturated. Babe got his color by rolling in the blue snow.

That's the background. Maybe you can have Paul solve the international situation, the housing shortage and bat fourth for the Washington Nats. In any case—only nine days left.

CALL UP your friends, make up a paddock and go to the Kentucky dance on Friday, December 17. To this preholiday dance in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, the college students in Washington and vicinity with Kentucky backgrounds are invited.

To the readers who are unfamiliar with the Kentucky term "paddocks," a word of explanation. A paddock is a table. During Keen Johnson's term as president of the society in 1946, the term began, took root and stayed.

Although there have been several reasons given for its beginning, one explanation is that it started in Kentucky during the famed Derby. It was a short step from "going to the paddocks to see the horses" to "join me at my paddock (or table) for dinner." And it was only natural to have residents of the blue grass State carry the expression to Washington for use in their home State society.

WILLIAM J. NEAL was elected president of the New Hampshire State Society at a meeting held Thursday evening in Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts.

The other officers are Francis W. Tully, first vice president; Miss Miriam Franks, second vice president; Miss Helen Martin, secretary, and Harry C. Burke, treasurer.

At the meeting, which was preceded by a New England baked bean supper, members of the society discussed plans for the Inaugural Ball to be held January 20.

The society adopted unanimously a motion indorsing the plan for a daily minute of prayer for peace at noon. This plan first started with Herve J. L'Heureux, chief of the visa section of the Department of State, who is a member of an American Legion post in Manchaster, N. H., where the plan originated.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER will be honored at a buffet dinner by members of the Kansas Society of Washington on Tuesday, December 14, in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower Hotel. It will be a "farewell" dinner for the Senator who is retiring at the close of this session of Congress.

Representatives of Kansas organizations in New York and Philadelphia are expected to be present as well as Kansans residing in the Washington metropolitan area. Omar B. Ketchum, president of the society, will express the farewell sentiments of fellow Kansans.

TONIGHT'S MEMO: There are two dances tonight, both at the Shoreham. West Virginia's Christmas dance will be held in the new ballroom with Dave McWilliams' orchestra furnishing the music. Delaware will dance to the music of Dave McWilliams' orchestra in the west ballroom.

Ask Anne — About Sending Food to Japan

I wish to know where and how I can send about $10 worth of food to Tokyo, Japan, to a Japanese woman. V. H. E.

CARE, Inc., which is located at 1344 Connecticut ave. nw., and can be reached by calling Columbia 9320, has a Japanese package which contains food especially suited to their diet. If you have the name of the woman to whom you wish the food sent, send it, plainly written, to them with the check for the food and they will see that it is delivered. If you do not have a specific person in mind, CARE's representative in Japan will see that the food is given to a needy woman if you suggest that when sending the check.

Would you advise whether or not I could use blanket material for a braided rug? This is my first attempt at braiding rugs and I am doubtful about a wool material in dyeing. E. R.

Yes, you can use a lightweight blanket material in a braided rug. It should dye very well. Follow the directions for dyeing wool which come with the dye you buy. Dyeing material for use in rugs is easier than when dyeing them for use in other ways because it is not serious if the color is not perfectly even.

I would like to renovate a child's natural-finish wood high-chair that has pink and blue leatherette upholstery on the back and wing-chair type arms. The leatherette is dingy while the wood, which I believe is waxed birch, is worn looking on the tray and foot rest. Have you any ideas on how I could brighten it? M. A. B.

If you are handy at such things, you can probably remove the dingy upholstery and replace it with new fabric. As you remove it, take particular notice of how it is attached. New plastic leatherette in many colors can be purchased by the yard in drapery departments. If you don't wish to undertake an upholstery job, could you fashion a slip cover which would conceal the faded upholstery?

As for the wood, it can be made to look new again by applying a coat of varnish in the color to match the wood, or enameling it. Before applying varnish or enamel, be sure all parts of the wood, including the tray and foot rest, are free of soil and sand until very smooth. If there is a coat of wax on the chair, this must be removed before applying paint or varnish by washing the wood with washing soda dissolved in water. Do not apply the finish until the surface is thoroughly dry.

PETUNIA!

Added Fruit Gives Christmas Ambrosia a Bit More Zest

TRADITIONAL Christmas dessert in many sections of the South is Ambrosia, a refreshing dish that is just right after a rich holiday dinner. Here is a version of Ambrosia that includes tangerines and grapefruit, as well as the usual oranges:

Florida Ambrosia

1 grapefruit
3 oranges
2 tangerines
½ cup sugar
½ cup shredded coconut

Cut slice from top of grapefruit, then cut off peel from grapefruit in strips from top to bottom, cutting deep enough to remove white membrane. Cut off slice from bottom of grapefruit. Go over fruit again, removing any white membrane. Cut along side of each individual membrane from outside to middle of core. Remove section by section. To section orange, cut round and round as in paring apple. Loosen sections as for grapefruit. Peel tangerines; cut sections in half and remove seeds. Arrange one-half of fruit in serving dish. Sprinkle with half sugar and coconut; repeat with other half. Chill at least 1 hour before serving. This recipe will serve six persons.

Waistline Club Open Wednesdays

A free class for women interested in getting or keeping a waistline, is being held Wednesdays at Central Center, 13th and Clifton sts. nw., from 7 to 8:15 p. m.

U. S. Army Photo

THE first company of regular Army WAC inductees at Camp Lee, Va., sets a sprightly pace into the mess hall after a 6:30 a. m. reveille. These are the 111 girls who were graduated yesterday on completion of their ten weeks basic course. Now they will be assigned to specialized training in Army schools throughout the country. They form the nucleus of the new WAC program geared to provide an independent unit which could expand in an emergency into all the Army's divisions and services

First Regular Army WACS Graduate

By Norma Lanum

THE WACs are bringing brains as well as beauty into the United States Army.

The Women's Army Corps was made a permanant part of the regular Army last June. And its first company of new recruits which was graduated from the 10 week training course yesterday at Camp Lee, Va., is made up of 111 young ladies whose intelligence is rated high above average. They're a pretty eyeful, too.

Well over half of the new inductees at the WAC training center at Camp Lee have an Army intelligence rating higher than that required for an officers' candidate school applicant. And most of the girls have joined the Army to add to their education.

At their graduation ceremonies yesterday, Lieut. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Army director of personnel and administration, told the new enlistees that he expects "the leavening influence of women will raise the intellectual standards of the Army."

Col. Mary Hallaren, director of the WAC, and the first and only Regular Army WAC officer, also spoke at the graduation. She told the new WACS "You're the foundation of the WAC and I know we're building soundly when we're building on you."

As for the good looks, the new WACS have lots to offer. No. 1 beauty asset is their pretty complexions. Three hearty meals daily and plenty of outdoor exercise has given them radiant coloring. Besides, their grooming is immaculate. A civilian staffed beauty shop on the post sees to it that their hair has the proper—and stylish—care.

The natural grace of the new Army girls is shown off best at a dress parade such as the one they gave yesterday following graduation. Their posture was faultless and they were perfectly coordinated.

She Wants to See the World

Why do so many girls want to join the Army? Susie H. Titus of Phoenix, Ariz., typical of yesterday's graduates, gives two reasons for her choice of careers. The diminutive brunette wants to learn more about chemistry and (Navy, please pardon the expression), she wants to see the world!

Like all other WACS in her company, Susie has been assigned to a specialized training school in the field she's interested in and the field her placement and intelligence tests have indicated she's best qualified for.

She will leave soon for Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where she will study pharmacy at Brooks General Hospital. On completion of her training there she'll be a private in the Medical Corps of the Regular Army.

As for seeing the world, the Women's Corps does its best to give overseas assignments to the girls who wish them, but it's practically impossible to fill all requests.

As Col. Mary M. Hallaren, director of the WAC, puts it, the Army has a hard time "getting the men to go over and getting the women to come back."

Up to Expectations

Eva L. Anderson of 1818 Kalorama rd. nw., another Camp Lee recruit, who'll be graduated on December 27, has wanted to join the Army ever since she was "that high."

The freckled-faced, sandy-haired enlistee bided her time teaching school in Alabama and working as a waitress until she was old enough to be a Wac. Now that she's finally in, the Army has lived up to her expectations. She loves the discipline and the recreation program—that includes softball, swimming, tennis, bowling, etc.—and the good food. In fact, she's gained 9 pounds already and feels "better than ever."

Same Basic Training

The Wacs basic training program follows that of the Army men—except the girls don't use weapons. The Women's Army Corps training center—Camp Lee, incidently has the only one in the country— is completely staffed by Wacs. Lieut. Col. Elizabeth C. Smith of Washington, Ind., is its commanding officer.

This first group of Wac recruits forms the nucleous of the regular Army program geared to provide an independent women's corps unit which could expand in an emergency into all the Army's divisions and services.

General Paul, who figured prominently in establishment of the regular Army Corps, reports that commanding officers in this country and overseas have requested some 50,000 Wacs. But at present there are only 4000 Wacs on active duty, a third of them in foreign countries.

The peacetime strength of the corps has been limited to 7500 enlisted women, 500 officers and 75 warrant officers. Colonel Hallaren estimates this maximum will be reached in two years.

And if the early Wac recruits are any indication, the Army will be proud of its women.

WE SELL DREAMS, LADY

A newspaper picture of this rambler would do no good because you must enjoy this breath-taking view from within the house.

From your living room, from the guest bedroom, and from the master bedroom you look out across the Potomac from high up in the wooded Virginia Hills, at the Washington Cathedral, MacArthur blvd., the reservoir and, of course, the river.

We don't have to tell you about the gracious reception hall, nor the stone fireplace in the gorgeous living room, the paneled study with window boxes, the large closets and bath for the 2 extra bedrooms. We don't have to tell you about the completely electric kitchen or the pleasant maid's room and bath, nor the 2-car garage, nor the slate roof, nor do we have to tell you about radiant heat; the price would suggest all that.

But we must tell you about the acre of wooded landscape sloping toward the river. We must tell you that this is the first of four new ramblers rapidly nearing completion in Riverwood. We must tell you about the exquisite powder room, the large storage attic, the convenience to downtown Washington (12 minutes' ride). We must tell you about the price, which is $59,000. We must tell you about one at $39,500 with random-width oak floors, 3 lovely bedrooms and 2 baths, recreation room and maid's room and bath, and above all, the outside living room, glassed-in with a view clear across to the District. Riverwood is unquestionably the finest subdivision of gracious homes in this entire area, where everything is new except the trees and the hill. If you'll be good enough to come up and look at Riverwood this weekend we'll be very grateful. We're here until dark, Saturday and Sunday.

To reach: Come over Key Bridge, out Lee hwy. to Military rd., right to Lorcom lane, right 3 blocks to new road, left over the hill.

HILLWOOD

On November 28, we sold one of the most outstanding homes in beautiful "Hillwood" to a Washington merchant who comes from New England.

On December 1, he moved in. On December 8, he moved out.

He didn't like Virginia! To prove it he is willing to take a substantial loss for the 7 days he lived in the house.

This home is suitable for an executive, member of Congress, or anyone else who must have ample room for entertaining.

The construction is of brick and stone and is nestled under large oaks on a quiet street. The recreation room is out of this world with complete bar and fireplace.

First floor consists of a lovely living room, large dining room, very large, beautifully equipped kitchen, bedroom and bath. The 2nd floor has 2 large bedrooms and 2 baths (one with sliding glass-door shower).

There is a 1st trust of $17,500 at 4½%, emanating at the rate of $133.88. A cash payment of $15,000 will be required. You've been waiting for a bargain, this is it.

Reader Fails to Get His Money's Worth (The Cad)

Picture of a man reading his Washington Post at lunch, in the Washington Hotel Coffee Shop:

He gives his order, picks up his paper, and glances at page one. In a half-minute he's turned to the financial page, and that holds his attention for quite a while.

Having checked on his stocks and bonds, he goes back to the editorial page, smiles at the cartoon, then folds the paper lengthwise and starts on the editorials.

At long last he's finished with the world's problems, and starts leafing his way back to Section Two. Now we're getting someplace.

Page B-1 stops him for a while, and so does Mary Haworth. Something about a fellow who confesses the indiscretions of his bachelor days, and now his wife nags him about them. Mary says he shouldn't have told—and a frown crosses the reader's face.

Finally he turns to the comic page. The wrong comic page. He's reading Drew Pearson.

Half-way through the latest dope on Congressman Thomas, the soup arrives. The paper is folded up and put aside, and when the meal is over, it's left on the table.

The poor guy never did get his whole nickel's worth.

PERSONAL NOTES

Bruce Hollihan, 100 19th st. se.: We spotted the ad first, and I spent three hours of hard work in finding out that there's no story in it. Some day I'd like to do a book about the stories that never get into print.

THIS'LL KILL YOU

An Iowa sociologist says that most murders are committed in the victims' homes. The moral seems to be:

People who don't get out enough tend to become home bodies.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

From Bruce R. Morris of Amherst, Mass., and D. N. M. of 8805 Grant st., Bethesda, Md., comes the disturbing news that this paper recently referred to Philadelphia's Ritchie Ashburn as "the Phils two-headed speedster."

Mrs. Arthur Eugene Beach of 4609 30th st. nw. thinks we publicized the biggest bargain event of the holiday season in a story about a doll sale at the Thrift Shop. We said:

"Quite a few dollars are still obtainable at the sale. Some of them are lovely enough to be collector's items."

Some of them? To me, they're all beautiful.

NEOLOGISM

Our cartoons are now known as "Herblockbusters."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Lonely, last-of-the-litter black puppy." (Republic 0796.)

"Gray striped male and female kittens, full of life." (Chestnut 6641.)

"Mother cat and three 8-week-old kittens, all housebroken." (Wisconsin 3693.)

"Four cute, gray kittens; healthy, playful, lovable." (Dupont 3736 after 6 p. m.)

PAGE DIOGENES

Mrs. Roberta B. Hutchinson of 1046 Quebec pl. nw. is one of the many contributors to the Dorothy Kilmer fund. And in her case, a story goes with the contribution.

Mrs. Hutchinson went to the Second National Bank recently, to make a deposit. From an envelope containing cash and checks, she removed the checks and threw away the envelope—and the cash.

On discovering her mistake, Mrs. Hutchinson called John A. Reilly, president of the bank, who immediately ordered an inspection of all the wastebaskets. But to no avail.

O'Connell

However, the next morning Reilly had better news. The cash had been discovered and turned in by another customer of the bank, Attorney John J. O'Connell of 1424 K st. nw.

So Mrs. Hutchinson figured that "one good turn deserves another," and sent part of the recovered cash to the Kilmer Fund.

And if you'd like one extra sidelight to this rather unusual incident—Attorney O'Connell is not only Banker Reilly's customer, he's also a relative.

SUGGESTION

"Government girls who can shop only on Saturday have a suggestion to make," says W. M. O'C.

"If housewives would do their Christmas shopping from Monday through Friday, they'd avoid the Saturday rush—and at the same time give the working girls a break."

GREEN-EYED MONSTER

This is the time of the year when I favor the formation of a group dedicated to the suppression of bathing beauty pictures from Florida and Southern California. It ain't fair.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Who was it that wondered whether married men drink so that they can see double and feel single?

NEW YORK—Laurence Steinhardt, the American Ambassador to Canada, brought his wife and daughter, Dulcie-Ann, to Sardi's restaurant one night. Dulcie-Ann has spent the last 12 years abroad with her parents, principally at the Embassies in Moscow, Ankara, and Prague—all diplomatic hotspots. "This is bliss," said the young lady now back in New York. "Bliss—which means not having to sit on pins and needles" . . . Mrs. Steinhardt, incidentally, ordered bacon and eggs and the Ambasstdor whispered: "Tell the waiter Canadian bacon. It improves relations between the countries and helps the Trade Balance."

Ex-Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia has been offered a $75,000 a year post in Hollywood . . . Senator Taft returns from his European tour December 15 . . . When Nunnally Johnson signed his new contract with 20th Century-Fox, it was a complex deal, and the document finally submitted to Johnson was a lengthy one requiring his signature in 50 places. "Will you please sign?" said the lawer. Johnson told him: "Of course. I'm a writer, ain't I?"

Robert E. Sherwood, about to start writing the book for his new musical, "Miss Liberty," didn't know how long it should be. "I've never written a musical before," he told Joshua Logan, who will direct it, and Irving Berlin, who will write the songs for it. They told him: "Don't worry about the length. Write it as if you were writing a play." Mr. Sherwood therefore wrote a full play—2½ hours long.

Christopher Welles, daughter of Orson Welles and Virginia Lederer, wrote a play which will be produced at her school. "Congratulations," her mother told her, "for not having written a part for yourself" . . . Elsa Maxwell saw Charles Boyer after the premiere of "Red Gloves." Miss Maxwell spoke to him in French, while Mr. Boyer replied in English . . . Leo Lindy, the restaurateur, will attend the $250-a-plate dinner for Chaim Weizmann. The invitation read, "Black Tie." Mr. Lindy showed this to his wife, and said: "See, Clara? And you kept telling me I was foolish in keeping my old waiter's outfit."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Fluorine Work Pleases Truman

By Drew Pearson

Sodium fluorine, the magic chemical that helps prevent tooth decay in children, now is in general use throughout the country.

Minges

President Truman was informed this week by officials of the American Dental Association. Virtually all dentists are using it to various extents, chiefly on school children.

"I'm mighty glad to hear that progress is being made," the President told a delegation led by Dr. Clyde M. Minges of Rocky Mount, N. C., president of the American Dental Association. "I've been very interested in sodium fluorine since the Public Health Service first revealed its amazing qualities."

Then the President added with a smile:

"It would be a wonderful thing if we could shed our teeth when they start bothering us and grow a brand new set."

Truman promised to give "serious thought" to a proposal by Dr. Minges and his colleagues that he proclaim a National Children's Dental Health Day next February to stimulate greater interest in the care of teeth by school children and their parents.

Note—The Washington Merry-Go-Round on March 5 first reported the amazing progress of the Public Health Service in using sodium fluorine to preserve children's teeth, and gave credit to Congressman Frank Keefe, Wisconsin Republican, for helping the Public Health Service. It was reported that sodium fluorine would save about 50 per cent of children's teeth from decay.

At that time, the American Dental Association's Journal was critical both of this column and the Public Health Service for publishing this claim, but ADA officials now admit that painting children's teeth with sodium fluorine at proper intervals when under the age of 13 will preserve them in about 40 per cent of the cases.

'No War'—Clay

Powder-keg-sitting Gen. Lucius Clay expects the Russians to intensify the cold war, but to stop short of a shooting war.

Talking privately to visiting Congressmen from the House Armed Services Committee, Clay predicted that the Russians would haunt Europe with the specter of war, but would not fight their cause on the open battlefield. Their game is to stir up chaos and fear as a breeding ground for communism.

The general admitted, however, that a misfire in this delicate battle of nerves could easily precipitate a war.

Greatest factor holding Russia back is American air power, Clay said, despite the fact that he is a ground soldier.

"The Russians have more respect for our air power than some of us at home have," he declared.

The constant droning of the Berlin aircraft in Russian ears has only increased that respect, he added, and, at the same time, impressed the rest of Europe. It is Clay's belief that Russia wants to test whether the airlift can survive the winter before backing down from the Berlin blockade.

Clay told the Congressmen that the Communists are going from door to door in Berlin as systematically as magazine-subscription statesmen, trying to scare individuals into the Communist camp. At night their threats are backed up with kidnapings and acts of terror, hundreds of individuals having disappeared forever behind the Iron Curtain.

Bouncing Bob Butler

For years controversy has raged inside the State Department regarding the relative merits of the career and the political diplomat. Career diplomats resent the intrusion of ambassadors appointed because they have ponied up during a political campaign—and this resentment is sometimes justified. So also, political appointees resent the lack of imagination, the routine viewpoint of many career diplomats.

One political ambassador, who got cuffed around at first is bouncing Bob Butler, the former St. Paul shipbuilder, who became United States Ambassador to Australia.

Today, however, Butler is Ambassador to Cuba and doing an A-1 job. Not only does he have the warmth and human quality which some career diplomats lack—and which Latin Americans love—but he has imagination. It was Butler who conceived the important idea of bringing President Prio of Cuba up to the United States on a good-will visit.

Good will between the United States and our Latin neighbors is something which needs a lot of working at. Since statesman Sumner Welles got out of the State Department it has been woefully neglected. But today, energetic, likable Bob Butler is doing a great job of warming up our good-neighbor policy—which is a lot more important than deciding who should sit where at dinner.

Note—Real fact is that career diplomats and political ambassadors frequently supplement each other, filling in the qualities the other lacks.

Forgive the Dixiecrats?

Chatting with Representative Albert Thomas of Texas the other day, President Truman hinted that he might be willing to let bygones be bygones as far as the Dixiecrats and certain Democratic campaign prodigals are concerned.

Without mentioning the Dixiecrats or anyone by name, Truman told the tall Texas Congressman: "There's been a lot of newspaper talk and speculation about how I'm going to get even with individual Democrats and groups who were against me before the election.

"Well, it's not true," he added. "I'm not mad at anyone and I don't want to punish any individuals or groups within the party. And I'm not mad at any States that went against me.

"I just want to weld the Democratic Party back together again into the solid organization it used to be in the old days. I'm going to keep right on working toward that end."

Note—Says Ernest Cuneo re Truman's cheek-turning toward the Dixiecrats: "He's like a man whom you tell, 'I've just shot your two brothers in the back,' and he says, 'That's fine, let's all be friends.'"
